$457,050 FOR PEARL HARBOR!

'Axis Gets 15 Toulon Warships,' Knox; Allies Holding In Tunisia Tank Battle

Bond Purchases Exceed Goal 4 Times In Day

Avalanche Of Dollars From Mansfield, Richland County Gives 'Home Front' Answer To Axis; Long Lines Jam Banks, Postoffice, Theaters.

The deafening roar of an avalanche of dollars today had given the Axis the answer of Mansfield and Richland county to Pearl Harbor.

It was a roar of dollars that will echo in the ears of the county's men in the armed forces, a roar of encouragement and support that will make the Axis sorrier than ever that it had ever heard of Pearl Harbor.

For Mansfield and Richland county, in a single day, yesterday purchased war bonds in the staggering total of $457,050, pasing the Pearl Harbor day goal by more than four times.

That total represents only outright purchases, and doesn't take into consideration bonds that will be bought during the month on the payroll deduction plan, in which 102 industrial and business firms in the county enrolled as 100 per centers in the payroll deduction plan.

A conservative estimate, made by the December war bond sales committee, placed that figure at $41,000.

That amount added to the total of outright sales would bring the "Remember Pearl Harbor—Buy Bonds" day's total to $498,050

And if the contributions of the 15 firms previously enrolled as 10 per centers were added in, Richland county went well over its December quota of $587,000 in one day.

In all, some 6,700 persons signed "Remember Pearl Harbor — Buy Bonds" pledges, as closely as could be estimated. These who made outright purchases and those who were buying bonds through payroll deduction were eligible to sign the pledges.

It was a spontaneous demonstration of war bond buying such as Mansfield had never seen before. It brought solid lines of bond purchasers to banks and other bond agencies. If swamped clerks. It even had bank presidents shedding their coats and handling bond applications.

Before more than a few hours in the morning had passed, more than enough bonds to meet the modest quota set by the Junior Association of Commerce, sponsor of the "Remember Pearl Harbor" campaign — $100,000 in outright purchases—had been bought.

There came a lull at noon. Banks closed their doors, re-opening when the "all clear" signal sounded after an air raid alert, in which Civil Air Patrol planes flew over the city, dropping "Remember Pearl Harbor — Buy Bonds" leaflets.

Then the real rush started—up to that time, the pace of Five Tankers Are Reported Undamaged Along With Fighting Vessels.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Secretary of Navy Frank Knox reported today that 15 French warships at Toulon remain intact and presumably in Axis hands while 50 other war vessels of the once proud French fleet have been scuttled.

Knox, giving the first complete and official picture of what happened to the main French fleet, said that his statements were based on aerial reconnaissance made by United Nations flyers, apparently from new North African bases. The navy secretary also told his press conference, at which the disclosures were made, that four French submarines had escaped to neutral or Allied ports.

The revelations by Knox indicated that sea and air forces of the United Nations ultimately may be called on to fight the former French ships which remained intact. The British navy wiped out part of the French fleet at Oran shortly after France fell, and the navy of the United States also blasted other vessels of France when American troops were landed at Casablanca.

Listed as intact at Toulon are two light cruisers, a demilitarized battleship, three destroyer leaders, three destroyers, two gunboats and four submarines, plus five tankers.

In the damaged category were placed three battleships, five cruisers, 15 destroyer leaders 11 destroyers, one seaplane tender, two gunboats, one net-layer and three submarines plus a cargo

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The air struggle developing over Tunisia will determine air superiority in the Mediterranean and possibly the whole European theater of war, Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold said today.

(By Associated Press)

A violent tank battle in which the Axis appeared to be making a supreme effort to hold onto Tunisian bases thundered in on its third day today with the veteran British First army and American shock troops withstanding the onslaught in a horseshoe position in the hills around Tebourba.

The Algiers radio reported that behind the horseshoe line which bore the brunt of Nazi divebombing, Lieut. Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson was massing assault forces to carry the attack on against Bizerte and Tunis when adequate air support had been established.

On the Russian front, the Germans kept desperately to their counter-attacks, but a Soviet communique declared: "In no sector did the enemy succeed in regaining positions he had lost or in improving his position in any way."

Heavy snowfall hampered the Red army's drive, but the Russians reported killing 3,000 more Nazis, recapturing two more villages on the Rzhev front, and gaining ground elsewhere along the battleline from Leningrad to the Caucasus.

The important French West African base at Dakar was reported thrown open to the Allied navies and air forces as one more fruit of the widely-debated agreement between Lieut. Gen.

SEES OUTPUT TOPPING ENEMY

Knudsen Reports Production In U. S. Reaches 50 or 60 Per Cent of Peak.

(By Associated Press)

BOSTON—Despite WPB Chief Donald M Nelson's concern over an apparent leveling-off trend in war production, Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, the nation's production trouble-shooter, today forecast a production peak far greater than Germany's or Japan's as new plants come into play and thousands of war workers gain skill

The former General Motors executive, now director of production for the war department, said during a press conference that American output of war materials now had reached about 50 to 60 per cent of "peak" but declared that "when we reach peak, we'll turn out twice as much as either Germany or Japan."

Defining peak as "total military requirement," Knudsen told a press conference that WPB Chief Nelson's report that war production in October was only up three per cent compared with September was "realistic" rather than "pessimistic."

Knudsen pointed out, however, that some plants were only now "coming into play" and that thousands of war workers were only now becoming skilled.

Knudsen said that women are the biggest reservoir of labor for war industry and estimated that employment of women would double by the end of next year.

M'NUTT STARTS MANPOWER TASK

Confers With Army, Navy on Basic Needs, Plans Labor Rationing.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt plunged into the task today of filling in the framework of a labor control structure likely to be unique in the nation's history.

As an opener, McNutt scheduled a meeting with the army and navy chiefs of staff to work out some fundamental questions, but ahead lay reorganization of his expanded agency and perhaps a battle with the outgoing congress in its dying days.

The first step, McNutt told a press conference yesterday, will be "a determination of the basic military needs for manpower."

While he declined on grounds of military secrecy to say whether he contemplated revision of plans for a total armed force of 9,700,000 men by the end of next year, he said this of the "second step" in his plans:

"The needs of industry and agriculture have been estimated with

Names of 7,000 to Appear In Pearl Harbor Edition

All of Them Signed Pledges and Want Our Boys to Know They're Doing Their Part; Other Sidelights.

That Dec. 13 edition of the News-Journal, the one that will go to all Mansfield men in the armed services, is going to have plenty of good news in it.

That was assured beyond the shadow of a doubt yesterday, when nearly 7,000 persons either bought bonds outright, or signified they were doing so via payroll deduction.

Those 7,000 names will appear in that Dec. 13 edition, as will the picture above, and the one on Page 2, together with many other pictures made in other bond selling agencies.

The men in the armed services will also learn, through that edition, how staunchly Richland county is backing them up—with $457,050 in war bonds bought outright on Pearl Harbor day, plus $41,000 in new payroll deduction pledges in 102 firms just enrolled in that select list, in addition to the 15 so enrolled before Pearl Harbor day.

Fourteen girls from Mansfield Senior high spent the afternoon and part of the evening at the News-Journal offices, typing the names of bond-buyers for use Dec. 13. They were to come back this afternoon to complete the job.

(Incidentally, they did a grand job yesterday.—Ed.)

HOLIDAY FADING

Congress Likely to Miss Its Christmas Recess.

WASHINGTON— (AP)—Legislative pressure due to the war may deprive congress of a formal Christmas holiday.

It appeared today that the historic 77th congress, which has been in session virtually without respite for two years, might work right up to Jan. 2 deadline before adjourning sine die, and Democratic leaders discussed plans to convene the 78th congress on Jan. 4 or 5.

Many representatives already have departed for a Christmas at home, however, virtually erasing all chance of passing any measure lacking unanimous approval, since one member could stop a bill by simply raising a point of no quorum.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Ohio roads were generally clear with a few scattered icy spots which have been cindered, the highway department reported today.

BATES' RETURN AS CHIEF LOOMS

FBI Agent Says He'll Be Back on Job If Commission Stands Pat on Ruling.

Meade K. Bates, Mansfield's police chief now serving in the Cleveland office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under a leave of absence granted by council for the duration of the war emergency, said here today he will return to police duties Jan. 14 if a city Civil Service commission mandate is not modified

The commission last Tuesday held that the state code limits a leave to one year, with no extensions permissible. Tom Woodard, commission member, explained today that on a Nov. 12 visit to Columbus he was advised by Attorney Breen of the state Civil Service commission that anyone not returning within the 10-day grace period following a year's leave is considered as having automatically resigned. Breen declared the city's ordinance worthless, Woodard said.

Bates indicated this morning that he planned to consult during the day with commission members to determine his exact status.

Attorney George W. Biddle, commission president, indicated today that that body would accord fullest consideration to any extension plea Bates might file. "We certainly do not wish to stand in the way of the fullest prosecution of the war effort," Biddle declared.

MYSTERY PLANE

Unidentifed Craft Throws Spotlight on Ohio Boats.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— State Defense Director Ralph Stone said today that he had received a report that an unidentified airplane flew ove Ashtabula ship yards last night, played a spotlight on ore boats under construction and then flew eastward.

Stone said that Stanley Prentice, civilian defense director in Ashtabula, telephoned the report to him. Prentice said that the plane was first noticed at 10:45 p. m.

State defense officials said that Ohio did not have any official airplane spotters in its defense set-up. Prentice was instructed to report to the state highway patrol in event it occurred again so that military authorities would receive the information as quickly as possible.

PORTSMOUTH —(U.P.)— Seven persons, including four Portsmouth firemen, were injured last night when a fire truck and a crowded city bus collided.

Boston Fire Probers Collect Evidence For Indictments.

BOSTON—(INS)—Probers of the Cocoanut Grove night club disaster today possessed sufficient evidence to seek indictments against at least 27 persons, two of whom are believed to be city of Boston appointive officials.

As the death toll stood at 495, it was learned that Attorney General Robert T. Bushnell had named three of his assistants to determine what action could be taken against officials whose subordinates did not adhere strictly to the law.

Meanwhile, a grand jury is to be asked to indict on charges of criminal negligence and manslaughter those deemed most to blame for the tragedy. The fire department probe brought out that the mad rush to the closed exits of the club was precipitated by a thrice repeated announcement over the club's public address system to "get your coats, everybody, and run."

CITES SAVINGS

OPA Counsel Says Consumers $4,500,000,000 Ahead.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Office of Price Administration has effected a saving of nearly $4,500,000,000 to consumers so far during the war, in comparison with experience in price rises during the last World war, says C. David Ginsburg, general counsel of the OPA.

An additional savings of $18,500,000,000 would be accomplished by holding prices reasonably stable during the next 14 months, Ginsburg told a regional meeting of members of the American Bar association yesterday.

"That is around $170 for every man, woman and child in the country," the OPA attorney asserted. Costs of war materials and war construction have been so held down as to save taxpayers almost $20,000,000,000 Ginsburg declared.

"Rent control will save tenants approximately $1,000,000,000 a year," Ginsburg asserted.

AP Says Mayor Asks Check Of City Books But Locke's Mum

Refusing to confirm today the report that he had asked for a conference with the state bureau of inspections on the possibility that "something might be wrong in some city departments" Mayor W. J. Locke also declined to explain whether or not his request was inspired as a barrier to the City Investment board's purchase of $100,000 worth of federal bonds with idle city money.

"I have nothing to say," was the mayor's reply when asked concerning a City Hall visit yesterday afternoon by Claren Risser, Marion, examiner for the cities' division of the inspection bureau. Risser recently praised the records of City Auditor Paul L. Kelly, complimented the city's fiscal officer for years of efficient service and did not note any material discrepancy in any of the departmental audits.

"That's interesting. I don't know anything about it," commented the mayor when told The News-Journal had an As-

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

There seems to be more of our good neighbors, the Latin-Americans, around Broadway and vicinity this season than ever before, and I must say they bring a note of enthusiasm and high spirits that is distinctly refreshing in this habitually blase town. Not only do they unveil more money and in higher denominations than anyone has displayed in these parts since the good old days of Wall street, but they are wine-buyers and orchid-bearers; they bend nicely from the waist when they bow, and they are the world's most enthusiastic audiences.

Kilgallen

In this latter regard, I should think they would be adored by all entertainers, and they probably are. I noticed the other evening at the Cotillion room, when Alberto Torres and his troupe had finished dancing, our Pan-American pals demonstrated their approval by heaving flowers at the performers until there was not a single posy left in the vases. It might be a little tough on the florists' bill, but it's wonderful for morale.

The movie writers must be under a small spell, or using the same dream books again. Among the recent crop of films, both "Iceland" and "Seven Sweethearts" related the weighty saga of a family of daughters distressed because the younger ones cannot marry until the eldest is suitably hitched. Now that those two flickers have reached the neighborhood palaces, along comes "You Were Never Lovelier," with the same ideas. It's an epidemic—something the boys ate at Mocambo, no doubt! . . . I am old enough to remember 'way back when Gloria Swanson and Herbert Marshall engaged in a cinematown romance that was burning enough to rate pages and pages in all the movie magazines. Well, times has elapsed, to put it mildly, and now and again the principals in that glamorous legend float into the ken of the Broadway gossip gatherers—but not together.

Marshall and his former wife, Edna Best, are good pals in the most civilized fashion. So, too, are Gloria and her ex-husband, the Marquis de la Falaise. But Gloria and Herbert from all indications, are anything but warm to each other. It doesn't seem to prove a thing—except perhaps that a divorce is really the only firm basis for a fine friendship.

Just for laughs the other day, I tested that old saw about standing on the corner of Broadway and 42d street and seeing everyone you know go by, and I am here to report that this proverb is definitely a fake. I stood for almost an hour (pretty fancy standing in this weather) and no acquaintance of mine passed, not even Broadway Rose, Henny Youngman, or Louis Shurr. Just people, assorted people. Later, dropping into Lindy's restaurant for a cup of coffee (I was chilly, Mr. Henderson) I counted 18 familiar faces, so I am forced to conclude that if the legend about meeting everyone you know at Broadway and 42nd street was ever true, then the people who used to go walking at Broadway and 42nd steret are now all sitting in Lindy's.

It is not often that I can imagine myself wanting to see Hitler's face but I confess I would like to see it when he picks up the Basle (Switzerland) newspaper some day in the near future and reads an advertisement placed there by an American showman. The ad reads: "Wanted: Theaters in Berlin, for American plays. Production soon. Signed, Jed Harris."

Harris, though appreciative of the joke, says he really isn't kidding. He's buying up plays for production in Europe after the war, and hopes to start casting in Germany before very long.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Stagestruck girls who bring their hometown fame to Hollywood and expect it to cut a quick path to stardom are invited today to consider the strange case of Evelyn Ankers.

Coons

Miss Ankers, famous on two continents, wears around Hollywood one of the town's more spectacular samples of deflated ego. It's such a sadly punctured job it would need long, tender treatment of praise, adulation, and belief in her own publicity to heal the holes—if the gal herself hadn't already vulcanized them with humor.

She thinks it's very funny.

Here's her story: Daughter of a British mining engineer and geologist, she was born in Valparaiso, Chile, and lived in South America until she was 10. Back in England, she took up ballet and ballroom dancing. She was such a good dance student that she took up teaching, but she was also growing so fast—she was still in her early 'teens—that the doctors told her to take it easy.

She was doing just that, lunching at the Savoy Grill in London, when Alexander Korda saw her—young, blond, beautiful—and sent over a note. So she became a movie actress, and she made about 20 English movies, and was one of five newcomers (another: Vivien Leigh) touted as most likely for stardom. She went back to South America and did radio chores along with a movie in Buenos Aires, and South America gave her a whooping welcome and acclaim.

She was on her way back there from England when she stopped in New York and Gilbert Miller signed her for his play, "Ladies in Retirement." At every port en route to New York she was photographed, interviewed, and idolized. Then came the Big Town. The photographers "shot" arriving celebrities, and Evelyn waited. And waited. Finally one photographer, seeing her, took a picture. Next day she combed all the city's dailies, saw no picture of Ankers, saw in just one story a mention of Ankers. She was "also aboard."

"And mine was the last name on the list," she laughs.

A movie contract, resulting from the Los Angeles run of "Ladies," hasn't been much more flattering. Her first picture was with Abbott and Costello, "Hold That Ghost." She had a star wardrobe"—one $14 dress.

"But I'm making progress—now I'm getting clothes specially made for me," she says philosophically.

She's made more than a dozen pictures. A dozen more—or the one "big A" they keep mentioning for her—and who knows? She'll be famous in the U. S. A. too.

Meanwhile, she's found herself a husband in Hollywood—Yeoman Richard Denning, U. S. N., formerly of the movies.

ATTACKS U. S. RETAIL PRICE SUBSIDY PLAN

Farm Bureau Head Says Rise In Government Cost Is Biggest Danger.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, charged today that the rising cost of government was "a much greater threat to the people" than the cost of food.

Attacking the proposal to keep retail prices down through subsidy payments, he said it was hard for farmers to understand why consumers, when their income was at an all-time high, should expect the government to pay part of their food bill.

O'Neal's statements were made in an address prepared for the opening of the Farm Federattion's 24th annual conventtion.

O'Neal's position on the subsidy question was made public only a few days after Secretary of Agriculture Wickard had expressed his approval of subsidies at another Chicago farm meeting. Wickard said he looked upon subsidies first as a means of increasing production and secondly as an anti-inflation control to keep down the price of food.

OUTLINES FOOD PLAN

COLUMBUS —(AP)— L. J. Taber, past master of the National Grange, asserted today that "unless we awaken to the fact that the farmer has to have gas for his truck and his tractor, children will cry for their daily bread."

Taber, in an address prepared for delivery at opening sessions of the 17th annual Ohio State Grange convention, outlined a three-ply formula for keeping the nation's food basket filled. It was:

"1. In manpower and equipment, treat agriculture as a war industry and enable the farmer to reach maximum production.

"2. Farm prices must balance increased costs of labor and material.

"3. In marketing, storing and distributing methods of farm products, co-operation and collective bargaining must be recognized the same as in labor and industry."

"The farmer's of America produced this year the greatest crop in all history," Tabor said. With two million less people to help and with a shortage of equipment, their record is outstanding.

DEATH CAUSES MADISON MIXUP

Governor-Elect of Wisconsin Dies, Right of Succession Held In Question.

(By United Press)

MADISON, Wis.—Gov. Elect Orland S. Loomis, 49, a Progressive, died of a heart attack last night leaving Wisconsin's highest elective office open to 80-year-old Lieut. Gov. Walter S. Goodland, re-elected Republican.

Loomis, a small town lawyer from Mauston who achieved a lifelong ambition to become Wisconsin's governor, died at 6:30 p. m. following the fifth heart attack he had suffered during the day. He had been taken to Wisconsin General hospital last Saturday suffering from a heavy cold and grippe. Dr. Mead Burke, his physician, said his relapse was due to a "complicated cardiac condition."

The situation precipitated by his death was without precedent in Wisconsin. Although Goodland probably will assume office, there was a possibility that defeated Gov. Julius P. Heil, a Republican, might continue to hold the governorship on the technicality that Loomis had not yet taken oath of office thus leaving Heil without a successor.

In such an event, Heil would order a special election to fill the vacancy.

Adopted Son, 13, Ends Own Life In Comedian's Home

HOLLYWOOD —(INS)— Barry Gilbert, 13-year-old adopted son of Film Comedian Billy Gilbert, committed suicide last night, police reported today.

Officers who investigated said that the boy apparently placed a rifle against his chest and discharged the weapon with his toe. His body was found in the living room of the Gilbert home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, the foster parents, were believed somewhere in the east on a bond-selling tour.

Detectives C. A. Fromm and H. A. Splame said young Gilbert apparently was despondent over a reprimand allegedly given him over the telephone by his grandmother, Mrs. Robert B. McKenzie, after he had informed her a pet parrot had escaped its cage and was loose in the house.

U. S. S. MIAMI, THIRD OF BIG NEW WARSHIPS, LAUNCHED TODAY

(By International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA — The light cruiser U.S.S. Miami third of a mighty trumvirate of warships launched in the Delaware river at Philadelphia in as many days, will slide down the ways at Cramps shipyards today to mark the first anniversary of America's actual entry into World War II.

Today's launching comes close on the heels of the christening of the world's largest battleship and queen-to-be of America's fleet, the U.S.S. New Jersey, which slid into the river waters just 24 hours after the aircraft carrier Belleau Wood.

The new ship is the first to be named after the city of Miami, Fla., and will be sponsored by Mrs. C. H. Reeder, wife of the mayor. She will be presented by Rear Admiral W. G. Dubose, president and general manager at Cramps.

Principal speaker at the 30 minute ceremony will be Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard.

As soon as the Miami slides into the Delaware, workmen will begin laying the keel of another cruiser, the U.S.S. Oklahoma City. The U.S.S. Miami is the 108th vessel to be built for the U. S navy at Cramp's since the yard was founded. Ships for the Civil, Spanish-American and first World wars were turned out there.

The Miami, however, is the first big ship to be launched from the yards since it was closed Oct. 4, 1927, and then brought to life again by World War II. It marks the first warship launching at Cramps since 1921, when the U.S.S. Memphis, sister ship of the Cramp-built "unsinkable" cruiser Marbelehead, slid gracefully down the ways.

Liquor Director Says Ohio Faces 50 Per Cent Liquor Decrease.

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — Ohioans may have to get along next year on just half as much liquor as they have had this year, State Liquor Director Jacob B. Taylor said today.

A 50 per cent drop in the state's liquor supply and a resultant $12,000,000 decrease in profits faced the state as liquor dealers continued to ration customers to one quart each.

Taylor said the one-quart-per-customer system was being abused and that a more equitable system would be set up if the attorney general ruled the state legally could ration a commodity it has for sale.

Up and Down THE STREET

A Pearl Harbor anniversary surprise, much more pleasant than last year's, came to Miss Bea Colvin, 100 Blymyer avenue, over the week-end when her brother, Earl Colvin Stocker, dropped in for an unexpected visit. Stocker, 34, was at Pearl Harbor during the attack last year, and was stationed at Wheeler field where he was taking special training with the air force. He was one of the two successful candidates out of 2,000 who applied for the course. At the time of the attack, Stocker said he and his buddies were asleep and thought the Jap planes were the dawn patrol. The flier came here from San Francisco, Calif., and is on his way to Air Corps Administration Officers' Training school at Miami Beach, Fla.

Councilmen who anticipated a sizeable revenue in the sale of an obsolete book typewriter apparently are doomed to disappointment. At last Tuesday's meeting a proposal to sell the rather intricate machine was submitted from the office of Service Director Fred B. Wolff, with no minimum price quoted. Various councilmen suggested the sale price variously from $25 to $50 but it finally was decided to ask estimates. According to City Clerk Robert R. Black today the best figure so far mentioned by any dealer has been a $2.50 junk price. Meanwhile, the huge contraption collects more dust in its third floor storage. "Even the Army wouldn't want that," one city hall stenog decided.

Mrs. Joseph Berger, 216 Superior street, regrets today having carried all her eggs" in one basket. She told police that after buying groceries at a downtown market she placed her purse in a market basket along with her purchases. After reaching another store and selecting an article to buy she reached for her purse which was missing—along with $81.50 in cash, several dollars worth of war savings stamps and her sugar ration book.

That Blanche Thebom, former Canton songbird who comes to Mansfield Thursday night as the second number on the Civic Music concert series, has an accompanist also from the Buckeye state was indicated here today in a letter from the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Hughes of Lakewood, requesting tickets for the concert. The visit is to be a surprise to pianist William Hughes. Although no single admission tickets are available for any of the concerts, Civic Music association officers immediately communicated with Mr. and Mrs. Hughes inviting them to be guests of the association.

Ohio Relief Costs Down as 2,000-a-Month Get Jobs.

COLUMBUS— (U.P.) — The widespread march back to industry has reduced payments on Ohio's 1942 relief rolls to approximately $11,800,000, the lowest relief bill since 1933, State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood said today.

Approximately 2,000 cases a month are returning to private employment, Sherwood said that thousands of employes who were classified as "marginal employables" last year now have found jobs in war plants and have been released from relief rolls.

"With the exodus from relief rolls to jobs in war industries continuing, the 1942 bill should smash by about $5,092,000 the previous low of $16,892,097 which relief cost during 1941," Sherwood said.

PICKS IOWAN AFTER BITTER INSIDE FEUD

H. E. Spangler Elected New Chairman in Willkie and Schroeder Compromise.

(By Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS—The Republican national committee — harmoniously united again after one of its bitterest feuds in history—set about organizing for the 1944 presidential campaign today under a new chairman labeled a neutral toward all candidates and one who said he was ready to call in and discuss strategy with all factions.

He is 63-year-old Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa party wheelhorse formerly associated with the Herbert Hoover and Alf M. Landon campaigns. He was elected chairman by acclamation late yesterday to succeed Rep. Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts, who resigned to devote all his time to his duties as leader of an enlarged house minority.

The Cedar Rapids attorney who has been a member of the committee for ten years, emerged as a compromise choice to break a two-ballot deadlock between Werner W. Schroeder, Chicago attorney and Illinois committee member, opposed by the Wendell L. Willkie forces on isolationist grounds, and Frederick E. Baker, a young Seattle business man.

Schroeder and Baker withdrew and proposed Spangler's election in the interest of harmony.

The Willkie forces stopped Schroeder as they had set out to do, but could not claim Spangler as their man, nor could any other presidential possibility.

As a further move to keep the party on an even keel as it plans for 1944 under the impetus of the recent election gains, the committee before adjourning adopted a resolution advocating that the United States owed it to the world to help other nations in making the next peace last.

Senator Taft of Ohio, who has renounced any presidential ambitions for himself in 1944 and came out for Gov. John W. Bricker of his home state, was a Schroeder backer, but he nevertheless offered the post-war cooperation resolution.

In accepting the chairmanship, Spangler told the committee he interpreted it not as a personal victory but as part of the effort to "defeat the New Deal."

Seek Full Story Of 'Screwiest' Abduction Case

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Federal agents delved today for the full story behind what one of them termed the "screwiest" of abduction cases as U. S. Commissioner J. Paul Geohegan prepared to arraign Mrs. Lloyd Cremeans, 23, on charges of kidnaping a baby in Columbus last Oct. 12.

Mrs. Cremeans and four other Huntington, W. Va., residents were jailed in the abduction of 10-month-old Daniel Scanlon from St. Ann's infants asylum, Columbus, where his mother, 17-year-old Jane Scanlon, was employed.

The infant was located in a Portsmouth hospital Saturday and returned to his mother. Mrs. Cremeans was brought here charged with kidnaping under the Lindbergh act. Similarly charged was Carl Chapman, 30, accused of aiding in the actual kidnaping.

Chapman is held in Huntington with Preble Chapman, 23; William K. Kimble, 25, and his wife, Irene, 23, the latter three charged with conspiracy to kidnap. Their arraignment is expected today or tomorrow.

Columbus police indicated that FBI agents were investigating the possibility that blackmail or draft evasion may have prompted the kidnaping. They hinted at other arrests in the case.

Loudonville Youth Pleads Guilty To Draft Evasion.

URGES ARMY TO TAKE CONVICTS

Warden of Pen Certain Men Would Make Efficient Fighters, Workers.

PHILADELPHIA— (INS)—Warden Herbert Smith, of the Eastern State penitentiary, is sure his boys would make good soldiers. And what's more, he'd "like to lead them on the battlefield myself."

Smith and Dr. Herbert Goddard, a member of the board of trustees, are striving to enable their prisoners to join Uncle Sam's forces upon release.

"Army discipline is all that most of these fellows need and I feel sure the men who join the armed forces after leaving here will never return to this or any other prison," Smith said.

The army rule has been that no man convicted of murder, arson, rape or sex crimes can be a soldier, but if a man has only one conviction, and is not on parole or probation, he may be accepted.

Smith, however, thinks some of his long-term charges, who were merely the victims of bad company, would make good soldiers if they were freed before they served their full time.

Besides potential fighters, there are several hundred machinists, welders, carpenters, plumbers, tinsmiths, steamfitters and mechanics who could make good in war plants, Smith said. The 3,000 inmates of "Cherry Hill" have bought almost $50,000 in war bonds, have donated blood to the Red Cross, and have made equipment for air raid workers. They also are manufacturing uniforms.

SEES NEED FOR MORE CHICKENS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—R. C. Miller, Ohio State university agricultural engineer, says that Ohio poultrymen will need to produce about 10,000,000 extra chickens this fall and winter if they are to do their share in adding 600,000,000 pounds of poultry meat to the national food supply.

Such a task, he added, might prove difficult because these out-of-season birds would require additional housing facilities on most farms.

Unexpected decision of the board of the Inter-City Bowling association to conduct a wartime tournament starting next March 13 means that Mansfield is in for one of its biggest kegling seasons of recent years.

The Inter-City pin joust, biggest annual tournament in the state of Ohio, will follow close on the heels of the state Moose tournament, and in fact the Inter-City will start one week later than the usual time to allow management of the Colony bowling alleys time to put the lanes back in tournament condition after the Moose move out.

Since way last spring, shortly after Mansfield was awarded the Inter-City for 1943, no one in Mansfield closely connected with the situation believed that the tournament would be held this winter.

Management of the Colony alleys and members of the Mansfield bowling association really would have preferred postponement of the tournament for the duration of the war.

They didn't want the successful record of the Inter-City broken by an unsuccessful tournament in Mansfield due to conditions beyond their control.

There were wide differences of opinion among board members who attended Sunday's meeting here.

President Del Pollock reported greater activity than ever among Lorain bowlers this winter, and concurred with E. F. Wilcox of Elyria in reporting that bowlers are demanding that the Inter-City be held, now that the ABC has been called off.

J. W. Hays of Alliance reported increased interest in the tourney in his territory.

On the other hand, the New Philadelphia member reported his territory, including New Philly, Dover, Steubenville and Martins Ferry, "are dead" due to lack of war work, men going to the army, and moving out of town to work at Ravenna and other war industry centers.

Most encouraging factors are bids made by Warren and Tiffin for the 1944 tournament. Apparently those cities believe that the tournament will hold up and will be worth working for a year from now.

And both Warren and Tiffin will be out working this winter to send a lot of teams to the tournament and garner enough votes to give them the 1944 event.

Buckeyes Pop Bucketball Lid

Tackle Veteran Ohio Wesleyan Bishops.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio State university pops the lid off its basketball season tonight with two sophomores in the lineup against a veteran Ohio Wesleyan university quintet in Columbus auditorium.

Two other Ohio cage teams started off the week last night. Bowling Green university ambushed the Camp Perry Soldiers outfit, 73 to 22. In the other clash, Akron took a 64-53 pasting from Niagara university at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The Ohio State-Ohio Wesleyan clash will be the opener for both teams. Buck Coach Harold G. Olsen said he would start Sophomores Gene Fekete and Dick Shrider as guards. Capt. Freddie Miller and Bud Wise will be at the forwards, with Bob Shaw at center.

Wesleyan Coach Lars Wagner has not named his starters, but they are expected to be Capt. Gene Quackenbush at center, Bob Kuskisson and Mahlon Hamilton, forwards, and Bob Brentlinger and Tommy Scott, guards.

SUN VALLEY SPORTS RESORT CLOSED

SUN VALLEY, Ida.—(U.P.)—The Union Pacific railroad today announced the closing of the Sun Valley sports resort on Dec. 20 for the duration of the war.

W. P. Rogers, Sun Valley general manager, said the resort was closing because of the growing manpower and food shortages and to cooperate with the government's fuel rationing and traffic eliminating programs.

New Ohio Loop Seen Possible

Bowling Green Action Paves Way For League.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Don't be surprised if Bowling Green State University's resignation from the Ohio conference results in the formation, as soon as the war clouds roll away, of a new and plenty tough athletic loop composed of Buckeye schools.

The Falcons, unable to schedule a representative slate of league opponents, quit the 40-year-old loop Saturday night. The Bee-Gees played only three conference foes in football last fall, and had only one conference tilt scheduled for next year.

Twelve of the 22 games on this winter's basketball slate were against conference foes, but at least one athletic director plans to cancel the date following the Falcon resignation.

W. Harold Anderson, acting athletic director at Bowling Green, said a dozen conference schools had declined to play the Falcons in football next year, many of them declaring "you are out of our class."

"There's no use belonging to a conference if you can't get any games," Anderson said. "The conference regulations declare that in making up the schedules for the various sports, the managers are to give preference to other conference colleges,' but it appears the members don't care to live up to that.

"Although the conference recognizes no champion in football or basketball, you can bet the coaches are the first ones to grab the Monday morning newspapers to look at the standings. I've been told that we could schedule more conference teams if we were not a member of the league."

Back in 1934 Hiram withdrew from the conference so it could use freshmen on its athletic teams—a privilege granted all loop schools for the war's duration.

Dayton and Xavier also quit that year to become members of the new defunct Buckeye league. In 1928 Denison, Wittenberg, Cincinnati, Miami, Ohio University and Ohio Wesleyan resigned from the Ohio to form the Buckeye, but Denison came back in 1933 and Wittenberg in 1934. In 1937 Akron was expelled for alleged use of ineligible players, despite a strenuous defense by Dean F. E. Ayer of Akron, who had served as president of the loop from 1931 to 1933.

There's a good chance that a new conference might be formed by the four state universities, Bowling Green, Kent State, Ohio University and Miami, along with a couple of others selected from such non-league schools as Akron, Dayton, Ohio Wesleyan and Western Reserve. Toledo, too, might be interested. Only Kent State and Toledo of that group are members of the Ohio league, and Toledo plays few conference opponents.

Mack Begins Rebuilding

It's Old Story To Venerable Connie.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— Just two weeks short of his 80th birthday, the venerable Connie Mack today once again began the laborious process of rebuilding his Athletics.

First step was the outright release of Infielders Bill Knickerbocker, Eric McNair and Larry Eschen and Outfielder Mike Kreevich.

"They were not much help to us," Connie said bluntly yesterday in making the announcement, "and I've other men to take their places. We hope to get somewhere next year, you know."

At the same time, Mack revealed that the A's may also lose the services of Louis N. "Buddy" Blair, third baseman, who expects to be drafted soon.

The gentleman of the game isn't worried about replacements.

"We've plenty of help on the way," he pointed out. "Eddie Mayo, whom we drafted from Los Angeles, will be available for third base. At shortstop will be Dick Atkins and Pete Suder. Atkins was bought from our Wilmington farm. Irving Hall, a rookie from Williamsport, will most likely play second base for us.

"As for outfielders, we have plenty of replacements. Felix Mackiewicz, who has been around for several years, ought to develop into a great ball-player."

Knickerbocker and McNair are 10-year men and entitled to their free agency. Kreevich has had eight years in the majors and Eschen came fresh from the campus of St. Lawrence university last summer.

DAN MERRITT SUBS FOR MELIO BETTINA

AKRON —(INS)— Subbing for Melio Bettina, who was unable to gain a release from the army to fight Mike Alfano of Hartford, Conn., Dan Merritt of Cleveland gets his big chance tonight in a ten-round feature bout at the armory against Alfano.

A win for Merritt over the classy Hartford battler would give him a big boost up the heavyweight ladder.

The scribes who reported no deals were made at last week's baseball meetings apparently overlook the fact that Branch Rickey upheld his reputation as a trader on at least one occasion. . . . While Leo Durocher was confined to bed by an attack of flu, reports John P. Carmichael of the Chicago Daily News, Boss Rickey dropped in for a visit. . . . Leo had just collected a couple of baseball bets and had placed two $20 orders for new hats on a table. . . . Rickey noticed the slips and pocketed one. "You can't possibly wear two hats at the same time," he told Leo, "and thanks a lot."

Make Bid for Coach of Year

Small South Dakota School Has Star Tutor.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—(AP)—If "coach of the year" nominations were made among small colleges, fans hereabouts would jump to the support of L. A. "Lefty" Olson of the Augustana (S.D.) Vikings.

This was a year when the dynamic mentor of the Vikings wasn't supposed to win. His teams had so completely dominated football warfare in the South Dakota conference that he finally gained admittance last spring to the North Central conference, whose membership encompasses the universities and state colleges in North and South Dakota and extends into Iowa and Nebraska.

Augustana became the smallest school in the N.C. with 550 students, and had to compete against seven other schools in the four-state area with an average enrollment of 1,400.

Fans were willing to go along with Olson for a few years until he could build up to the strength of the new conference.

But he wasn't in the mood to wait, and in the Vikings' first league competition, he walked off with the track championship.

When the football season rolled around, Lefty kept the magic touch and in the opening conference game, his charges promptly knocked off South Dakota 19-0.

From that point on, it was smooth sailing as the Vikings walked over Omaha 32-0, North Dakota 19-0 and Morningside 27-13 to tie Iowa Teachers for the championship. The Iowans, also undefeated in the N.C., were not on the Vikings' schedule.

Augustana whipped all non-conference opposition to finish the season among the country's few unbeaten and untied teams.

Olson, a native Minnesotan, models his teams after Bernie Bierman's system. Using the Minnesota single wing back style, the Vikings rely on a powerful running attack and a staunch defense. They averaged slightly under 300 yards a game with their ground attack and their defensive record was the best in the league.

GALLAGHER DENIES NOVIKOFF TRADE

CHICAGO—(INS)—General Manager James T. Gallagher of the Chicago Cubs denied rumors today that he had traded Lou Novikoff, the "Mad Russian," or even that negotiations were in progress.

Branch Rickey, new head of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was reported interested in acquiring Novikoff during the recent major league baseball meeting in Chicago and it was assumed he would renew his efforts to get him. Several other clubs hinted they would like to get hold of Novikoff if a favorable deal could be arranged.

ROOKIE BOOKED FOR RIZZUTO'S POST

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—President Ed Barrow of the New York Yankees said today that the club planned to use Rookie Bill Johnston at shortstop in place of regular Phil Rizzuto, now in the navy.

Johnson, from Montclair, N. J., will play the position while Frankie Crosett is under 30-day suspension, imposed for his World Series' argument with Umpire Bill Summers. Johnson hit .291 with Newark in the International league last season.

Day Retains Pin Margin

But Crimmins Takes Nine of 15 Games.

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Johnny Crimmins of Detroit was in hot pursuit of Champion Ned Day of West Allis, Wis., and Santa Monica, Cal., today after winning his second consecutive 15-game daily block in the national tenpin match championship.

Crimmins won nine of the 15 games bowled yesterday to cut Day's early lead to 12.01 points under Peterson system of scoring. At the conclusion of the 45th game of the 90 game match Day had a total pin count of 8,943 to Crimmins' 8,692. Day had registered 204.43 points to the challenger's 192.42.

Yesterday's games were below the fast pace set in the first two days of bowling. Crimmins registered 921 to Day's 899 in the first five-game block and the men each scored 972 and 937 for the evening matches.

In the elimination tournament running concurrently to determine the 10 men who meet Crimmins and Day in a round robin tournament starting Friday, Buddy Bomar retained his lead with an aggregate score of 3,164 pins. George Young of New York rolled a 1,099 series, second best in the meeting, to go into a tie for second place with Dawes Comins, Kansas City, with 3,056.

Other high scorers included Connie Schwoegler, Madison, Wis., 3,047; Norman Nelson, Chicago, 3,013; Andy Varipapa, Brooklyn, 3,018; Bill Busch, Gary, Ind., 2,997; Paul Krunaske, Chicago, 2,979; Ad Carlson, Chicago, 2,940; and Alex Graham, New Philadelphia, O., 2,940.

Discourages Bowl Trips

Eastman Suggests Sale Only To Home Fans.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The new years day bowl football games should be witnessed only by local fans and not by any of the competing team' "followers," Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman ruled today.

Seeking to hold Holiday travel to a minmum, Eastman said he had wired sponsors of the Rose and Sugar Bowls that if they provide the competing teams with tickets for sale in their home communities, it would be counter to requests he has made that their sale be allowed only in towns where the games are scheduled.

"We must discourage enthusiasts, alumni and team followers from making these trips this season," Eastman telegraphed Robert M. McCurdy, president of the Tournament of Roses.

"I hope that travel from Georgia may be limited to essential people," he said. A copy of the telegram was sent to the University of Georgia.

A wire from New Orleans, Eastman said, revealed that tickets for the Sugar Bowl had been provided for the competing teams to sell at their respective schools.

Eastman replied that he "sincerely hoped distribution would be restricted as is being done in other bowl games.

Big Ten Studies War Rules

Service Relationships, Frosh Play Debated.

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—New policies to govern the conduct of wartime athletics will be drafted today by faculty representatives and athletic directors of the Big Ten.

Two controversial questions face the conference officials:
(1)—Relationships with service teams.
(2)—The freshman rule.

The first topic was loaded with "dynamite" and there may be a tendency on the part of Big Ten leaders to "soft pedal" the issue, but some league representatives were ready to demand a strict set of eligibility requirements for the service teams if they remain on the schedules of conference teams.

The move was directed primarily at the Iowa Pre-Flight school. Big Ten teams reportedly understood when the Pre-Flight teams was formed that it would be manned by cadets. Special permission later was gven for the use of officials "when necessary." However, early in the season when the bulk of the Big Ten teams were met, the Seahawks used a team composed largely of officers and that policy had many repercussions around the conference.

Most conference coaches and officials believed that a definite agreement should be reached with the service teams as to the type of their personnel to prevent a recurrence of the ill-feeling that developed this fall.

The freshman rule—which requires a year's residence before an athlete is eligible for varsity competition—probably will become a war casualty.

With the draft of 18 and 19 year old boys and the service calls of older students in the army and navy reserve units, it appears unlikely that colleges will have sufficient manpower to carry on their intercollegiate sports program next year unless first year men are used.

The freshman rule was the subject of long and lively debates last spring, but it was retained by the Big Ten conference leaders counseled against "too hasty action" on the matter.

Possible adjustments in the 1943 football schedules to conserve transportation and action on minor sports also will be discussed.

Don Hutson Wins Scoring Honors

CHICAGO —(AP)— Don Hutson, the Green Bay Packers pass-grabbing end, was officially acclaimed today as the National Football league's scoring champion for 1942, with records that will probably stand longer than any others in the book.

Hutson caught 17 touchdown passes, place-kicked 33 extra points—both records—and added a field goal for a total 138 points, also a record. His record output last season was 95 points.

The next four places went to Chicago Bears. Ray McLean posted 54 points for second place, followed by Gary Famiglietti with 48. Frank Maznicki with 45 and Hugh Gallarneau with 42.

And So We Said "Yes, Mrs. Sowash, We Will Print Your Message To The Boys"

Here's the story: We printed recently a notice to industries, business firms, lodges and other organizations that on Sunday, December 13th a special edition of the Mansfield News-Journal would be sent to Mansfield men in the service. This issue would carry the names of Mansfielders who will have bought bonds on "Remember Pearl Harbor Day" or who are listed under payroll deductions. Mrs. H. R. Sowash of 155 South Foster, noticed this, and here was her conversation: "I'm not a lodge, but I'm the mother and mother-in-law of two fine boys in the service, and I want to send them a message." "Well, Mrs. Sowash, what would you say?" "I'd say this," she replied, "We are rooting for you boys and know you'll come thru with flying colors. The Howard Sowash Family."
It seemed to us if it was a good idea for Mrs. Sowash it would be the same for others.

Orchestra Leader Louis Prima Gets Birthday Surprise

Louis Prima, the "Be Happy" maestro and trumpet player, lighted another candle on his birthday cake in Mansfield yesterday while making four appearances with his orchestra at the Madison theater and appealing to the audience to "Remember Pearl Harbor" by buying war bonds.

The band staged a birthday surprise for Prima after the supper hour show and presented the New Orleans musical leader with an array of gifts and a birthday cake to a special arrangement of "Happy Birthday to You." Now en route to Norfolk, Va., for a three weeks' engagement the band has been on tour since last week when it left New York.

In addition to Prima the band carried several other stars in their own right, among them Prima's brother, Leon, in whose New Orleans restaurant Louis got his musical start some years ago. Leon played a sweet style of trumpet, Lily Ann Carol, a Lorain, O., songbird who has been with the band three years, proved a showstopper while 18-year-old Jimmy Vincent gave the drums such a dusting off as has not been seen here this season.

Boxing, both amateur and professional, also suffers from a lack of athletes. The fighters are learning to fight in a new, more important battle. They're fighting for keeps now.

M'NUTT STARTS MANPOWER TASK

Confers With Army, Navy on Basic Needs, Plans Labor Rationing.

specific reference to war production schedules and crop goals.

"The total population of the nation is now considered as a national pool from which the needs of the armed forces, industry, agriculture and essential civilian activities will be supplied."

In supplying those needs, McNutt said, draft boards now being integrated into the war manpower commission will give essential industries and agriculture equal rather than secondary consideration to the armed forces' demands.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, he added, will continue in his post of draft director.

With all voluntary enlistments halted selective service officials will give inductees a chance to express a preference as to which branch they wish to enter, although this will not necessarily mean, McNutt said, that their preference will be granted.

McNutt gave this forecast of future possibilities:

1. Rationing of scarce labor where available manpower is insufficient to meet all competing demands, the rationing to be handled through priorities "based on the urgency of various kinds of war production and services and linked to the production schedules and the flow of materials."

2. Adjustment of hours of work—upward in some industries but downward in others—and other steps to increase efficiency and to reduce absenteeism.

3. Transfer of hundreds of thousands of workers to more essential jobs, with guarantees of "suitable standards of wages and working condition" and payment of transportation costs in some cases.

4. Channeling of all employment through the U. S. Employment Service in labor shortage areas and inspection of plant labor arrangements to prevent hoarding of unneeded workers.

AP Says Mayor Asks Check Of City Books But Locke's Mum

sociated Press report from Columbus that the conference had been requested by him.

After first stating he didn't know Risser, the mayor corrected himself, saying: "Oh yes, I saw him crossing the street yesterday afternoon."

The Associated Press reply to a News Journal query follows:

"Frank B. Thomas, chief of the cities' division of bureau of inspection, says Mayor Locke called him last week and asked him to come up for conference on possibility 'something might be wrong in some city departments.' Thomas unable to go but is sending Examiner C. E. Risser this week to confer with Locke and then report back on what should be done."

Risser had not reported back to Thomas up to noon today.

Locke's telephoned request, incidentally, followed announcements by Police Chief Thomas M. Bell that commercial bingo is passe except for bona fide members of chartered clubs, coupled with the suppression of cash-paying tip sheets and punch boards.

It was not learned today whether or not Locke's request was made before or after he had been served at 9:30 a. m. Friday with a notice of the Investment board meeting at 10:30 a. m. Saturday. Auditor Kelly reported that Locke offered arguments against the meeting at that time. Later he consulted City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner regarding the legality of a board meeting without a member of council present, Councilman C. N. Shultz having resigned last Tuesday night as a member of the investment board.

At 9:45 a. m. Saturday Locke sent an aid to Kelley asking that the meeting be postponed and at 10:05 a. m. Kelley received a copy of the mayor's letter setting up reasons why the session should go over.

The mayor refused to attend the board meeting, Wagner acting as chairman pro tem. After Kelley's report as fiscal officer was read City Treasurer Earl K. Troll made a motion for purchasing $100,000 worth of government securities. Wagner, Troll and Kelley all voting their approval.

The bonds have been purchased.

CHIEF'S ANGRY

Doesn't Care What Happens to Gasoline Hoarders.

KENTON — (U.P.) — Fire Chief Ralph Jones of Kenton doesn't care what happens to homes and garages where gasoline is stored illegally. As far as he's concerned they may burn to the ground.

Aroused by numerous reports of hoarding, Jones instructed his men not to fight gasoline-fed flames in buildings where "it is apparent the volatile liquid was stored illegally." The risk of being trapped was too great, he said.

PEARL HARBOR BOND BUYING HITS $457,050

Day's Purchases Pass Goal 4 Times as City, County Give 'Home Front' Reply.

bond buying had been relatively moderate. Within minutes, lines formed in the banks. Every window was busy. Tellers, bookkeepers, cashiers and presidents were impressed into service. At the postoffice, clerks were so swamped they just took names and addresses, gave back receipts, and told people to come back for their bonds later.

People were still buying bonds at the Madison and Ohio theaters after the ticket-windows had closed at 9:30.

One of the largest bond purchasers yesterday was the Tappan Stove company. Instead of its usual cash Christmas gift to employes, Tappan officials yesterday bought them war bonds, and the total purchase was, in the words of company officials "well over $50,000."

Every Tappan worker who was on the payroll Jan. 1, 1942, will receive a $100 bond. Those employed a lesser time will receive bonds in lesser denomination, but in proportion to time served.

Nor were Tappan men now in the armed services overlooked. Those who went into service this year will receive bonds in the same proportion.

The company made its bond purchases yesterday, "to promote and help the bond-buying cause" and to "reward the earnest application and co-operation of its employes."

Another large purchaser was the city investment board, which purchased $40,'00 in war bonds.

And shortly after noon yesterday a man bought ten $1,000 bonds at a bank.

Right there the $100,000 quota was made. But there was more of it, as far as Mansfield was concerned than reaching a quota. Everyone remembered Pearl Harbor, and everyone wanted to do his part—for the men in the armed forces who are doing theirs.

And when the day was done, and the sales totaled, campaign officials gasped.

For purposes of comparison, it might be interesting to put Mansfield's figure alongside that of Portsmouth, a slightly larger city.

Portsmouth's total, as reported by the Associated Press, was $335,000 for the day. You know Mansfield's figure—$457,050.

One day had produced total of war bond purchases sought for an entire month, and had provided four times as many fighting dollars as had been originally sought.

In far-off Chicago this morning, Paul M. Eliot, county bond sales chairman, got a telephone call from James Eberly, of the Junior Association of Commerce, and Roger Bolin, Westinghouse advertising manager, who were co-chairmen of the "Remember Pearl Harmor—Buy Bonds" activity.

Eberly says he had to repeat the figure—$457,050—twice. Eliot didn't believe it the first time. Then he had to take time to get his breath.

When he did, he said:

"That's simply wonderful. It's almost unbelievable. That will put us over for the month of December. I'm sorry I couldn't be there to see it. It must have been terrific. Be sure to thank every one who had a part in it."

Eliot is in Chicago attending a bankers' meeting. He is vice president of the Farmers Savings and Trust company.

Equally as impressive as the tremendous burst of outright bond purchasing was the success of the campaign to enroll industrial and business concerns in the 100 per cent payroll deduction plan, wherein all employes authorize deduction of 10 per cent of their pay for bond purchases.

Since Dec. 1, the reports yesterday showed, 102 firms in the county had joined the select list. That, added to the firms previously in that category, brought the total to 116.

The 102 firms represent a total of 2,700 employes, and the estimate of $41,000 as the total amount per month to be deducted from their salaries and wages is probably conservative.

Jubilant to a point of almost disbelief as they surveyed the returns from the bond selling agencies—the four banks, the Mechanics Building and Loan company, the postoffice, the Ohio and Madison theaters and the Ohio Fuel Gas company, Co-Chairmen Eberly and Bolin issued a statement of appreciation to all Richland county and to all workers who had helped put the campaign over.

The statement said, in part:

"The results are simply wonderful. They show again the kind of spirit that the people of Mansfield and Richland county have. We had hoped to reach $100,000 in outright bond sales on Pearl Harbor Day, in addition to all of the payroll deduction pledges. You can imagine our amazement and delight when the final figures came in—$457,050—in bond sales in one day in Mansfield.

"In addition to that, 102 firms employing a total of 2,700 employes, have reported reaching their goal of 10 per cent of payroll deduction during the campaign which ended yesterday. We estimate conservatively that the total increased bond sales on the payroll savings plan represented by the pledges of those 2,700 employes is $41,000 per month. So if you add the $41,000 increased payroll deduction for December to the outright sales, we arrive at a total figure of $498,050. That's how Mansfield and Richland county folk "Remembered Pearl Harbor"—to the tune of $498,050.

"It should also be remembered that before this campaign started, we already had 15 companies representing 7,000 employes who had achieved 10 per cent goal on payroll deduction. Adding the new ten percenters from this campaign we now have 9,700 employes in Richland county who are saving 10 per cent of their pay every month for war bonds.

"The Remember Pearl Harbor Bond committee is indebted to many individuals and many organizations who cooperated in the campaign. In particular, Mansfield should be proud of the fine work done by the Civilian Defense organization in distributing pledges, the Civil Air Patrol in bombing the city with leaflets, the police department in collecting pledges, the members of the Junior Association of Commerce for their work in contacting business firms, the Volunteer Red Cross workers for their stenographic assistance at the War Bond office, the Richland Victory Civic Committee and Navy Recruiting services for their commemoration program at Central park, the Retail Merchants for their window displays, the Senior high school commercial class for helping sort and type the pledges, and also the grand cooperation the banks, building and loan companies, the gas company, theaters and other bond selling agencies, and finally Mansfielders should be proud of themselves for backing up our men in the armed services by purchasing a half million dollars in war bonds."

Postoffice Bond Buying Races Yule Rush

The postoffice at this time of the year is a busy place on an ordinary day, with Christmas mailing. But it was doubly so yesterday, as hundreds of Mansfielders stood in line to buy war bonds in the city's "Remember Pearl Harbor—Buy Bonds" campaign. The postoffice was one of the busiest of all Mansfield war bond agencies. Doesn't the picure prove it?

and bonds totalling $781.60 yesterday. Pupils bought $294 in stamps and $487.50 in bonds, he said. Nine stamp books were completed and exchanged for bonds, while bond sales ranged from $25 to $100. Bond purchases were arranged through authorized issuing agents.

Mrs. Margaret Balk, South Main street, who received a telegram from the Navy department yesterday morning announcing the safe arrival of her husband, Jacque, at a foreign destination, celebrated by buying a bond for him. Mrs. Balk was among the most enthusiastic purchasers at the Mechanics Building and Loan association.

It might just as well have been the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, but it was a clerk, a judge and the police chief that preceded a newspaper reporter to a window of the Citizens National Bank and Trust company.

Ever since that first Pearl Harbor day, Mrs. John Hoffman, 570 West Fourth street, has been saving every dime that came her way. Yesterday she marched into the Mechanics Building and Loan association with enough dimes to buy two bonds, one of $25 size and the other $50. Mrs. Hoffman explained that she had not purposely had any money changed into dimes.

* * *

The Inter-City Bowling association, meeting in Mansfield Sunday, voted to purchase a $100 series G war bond and to make the purchase here so that it would be credited to the Mansfield total.

* * *

Among the scores of people that stood, with money in hand, ready to buy bonds at the Farmers' bank were others clutching penny and small change banks, which they emptied to pay for their purchases.

Dean Yeager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Yeager, 258 Sheridan avenue, celebrated his tenth birthday yesterday by the purchase of a $25 bond. Dean, a pupil in the fifth grade of the West Fifth street school, used gift money to supplement some he had saved.

Little Johnny Catlett, who was born Dec. 7, 1941, at about the time news of the Pearl Harbor attack was received, marked his first birthday with the purchase of a $25 bond. He is the son of Representative and Mrs. John Catlett, 1023 Woodland road.

When Mansfielders found out that the Ohio Fuel Gas company was also selling bonds yesterday, the word spread quickly enough to raise the day's sale to $3,100, W. C. Mead, manager, reported. Of this amount only three or four $100 were sold, the rest being people wanting to purchase their $25 bond on Dec. 7.

After just being told Friday over their public address system to "think about buying war savings stamps on Pearl Harbor day," pupils at Senior high school mobbed the bookstore yesterday to buy $261.15 worth of bonds and stamps, Harry B. Scoles, bookstore manager, said.

Commemorating service men who were killed in the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, the Richland county Civic Victory committee directed impressive services held at the flag in Central park just before the bond drive got under way at high noon yesterday. Twelve men of Company D, in charge of Lieut. Charles A. Condon and Sgts. Don Frampton and Winfield Bonnell fired a volley and sounded taps after the flag was lowered to half-mast at 12:22 p. m. It was raised again at 12:25 p. m. The American Legion furnished the color guard and bugler.

Stamp and bond buyers at the Mansfield postoffice were amused at the persistence of a customer who wanted to purchase a $5 stamp for $3.75 in cash. He explained that he had been told that this would be possible and it was only after considerable talking that R. E. Winters, money order clerk who was manning the bond window, finally convinced him that he would have to put $5 on the line if he wanted the stamp. And the customer put down the $5.

* * *

Yesterday was a record breaking day all-around at the postoffice as far as crowds were concerned. Not only was there a continuous line-up of people before the bond window but there was a steady stream of customers at all other windows, including parcel post and stamp. The parcel post business was "tremendous," according to Postmaster Herman E. Homberger, who said "the day was one of the heaviest we've had."

One woman bond buyer managed to sandwich some Christmas shopping between the time she applied at the postoffice for a $25 bond and the time she returned for it. But she forgot to mention to the postal clerks that she was taking momentary leave. Just before window closing time the clerks noticed the bond but no owner. The woman arrived in the niche of time however with the explanation that she had run out to do a little shopping while the bond was being filled out.

The Mansfield Savings Trust National bank not only had "more persons in the bank yesterday than at any time in its history," and it sold the greatest number of bonds, Henry G. Brunner, vice president, said.

Clerks gave up their full lunch hour at the Citizens National Bank and Trust company to accommodate the rush of bond buyers from other business houses unable to buy at any other time. The sale "started with a bang," Charles W. Fuchs, president, said, and the bank ran short of both the $25 and $500 bond denominations considerably before closing time.

KNOX REVEALS AXIS GETS 15 TOULON SHIPS

Allied Fliers Find Warcraft Undamaged in Scuttling of 50 Other Vessels.

ship and a demilitarized battleship.

"Actual condition of the French fleet at Toulon as revealed by air reconnaissance showed that quite a few of the ships still are intact," Knox commented.

Knox said he was at a loss to know why German sources encouraged earlier reports that the entire French fleet at Toulon had been scuttled.

Knox issued a breakdown of the various types of vessels sunk or damaged and others apparently intact. The first classification of damaged included:

Dunkerque (battleship)—Awash in drydock.

Strassbourg (battleship)—Aground on even keel.

Provence (battleship) — Stern very low in water.

Commandant Teste (seaplane carrier)—Severe list to port.

Two heavy cruisers (Suffern class) very heavily on fire.

One light cruiser (Galissonniere class)—Very heavily on fire.

Algerie (heavy cruiser)—Aground and possibly on fire.

Scuttled and lying with decks awash or on side: Eleven destroyer leaders (Aigle or Guepard class); one destroyer leader (Tigre class); one destroyer leader (Volta class); one destroyer leader (Fantasque class); six destroyers (Le Hardi class); three destroyers (Simoun class); two destroyers (Pomone class); two gunboats (Elan class); Gladiateur (net layer); Golo (cargo ship);

One heavy cruiser (Suffern class); Condoreet (ex-battleship, demilitarized); one destroyer leader (Mogador class).

Afloat and apparently intact: Two light cruisers (Galissonniere class); L'Ocean (ex-Jean Bart, ex-battleship, demilitarized); two destroyer leaders (Tigre class); one destroyer leader (Aigle or Guepard class); two destroyers (Le Hardi class); one destroyer (Simoun class); and two gunboats (probably Arras class).

"Of the 13 submarines seen afloat on Nov. 26, none are now visible," a statement issued by Knox said.

"Six are in drydock, two completed submarines are damaged and four submarines under construction are apparently intact."

One submarine, attempting to escape, hit a mine and sank, the statement added. "Of the four submarines known to have escaped—the Iris—is now interned at Barcelona," the statement added.

"Casablanca and Marsouin reached Algiers; Glorieux called at Valencia in damaged condition and is now at Oran."

Of the merchant shipping in the harbor at the time of the scuttling, all appeared undamaged with the exception of one merchant vessel of 270 feet which was observed in a sunken condition.

The merchant fleet included five tankers.

"No fires seen burning on land and no destruction apparent," the statement added.

In conclusion, the report added that magazines and storage stations at nearby villages of Milhaud and Mondrier are intact.

Knox Says Japs Lose Million Ship Tons

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said today that before the outbreak of war Japanese merchant tonnage was approximately 6,000,000 tons and that between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 tons have been sunk since war began.

Discussing the effect of this loss he said:

"It is obvious that Japan, like England, is an island empire and depends on water-borne transport not only for home purposes but for supplying its military forces abroad."

Knox's figures did not take into account any new shipping built by the Japanese since the outbreak of war.

BRITISH DRAFT AGE LOWERED

English Youths Of 18 Now Liable For Military Service.

LONDON—(AP)—Britain lowered her draft age to 18 years today and disclosed she was sending men between the ages of 37 and 41 directly into war factories in order to solve the manpower needs of her industrial and fighting armies.

The new minimum draft age was set by second reading of a bill to lower the military service liability age from 18½ to 18. Second reading in the House of Commons is tantamount to enactment. The final, third reading is a formality.

Labor Minister Ernest Bevin informed Commons that there was no immediate intention to lower the age limit further and that men under 19 would not be sent overseas.

BATES' RETURN AS CHIEF LOOMS

FBI Agent Says He'll Be Back on Job If Commission Stands Pat on Ruling.

"The original action last week," Biddle said, "was in the nature of a routine effort to establish the desires of a man on leave and the commission did not intend to imply it would or could interfere with Bates' pension rights."

Unfortunately, commission members said, their meeting was called in the midst of a gambling shakeup and at a time when it was evident outside forces were seeking the removal of interim Police Chief Thomas M. Bell. The commission is nowise involved in gambling issues or departmental jealousies, members declared.

In event of Bates' return Bell will move back to a captaincy. Captain Schwab will return to the third shift command, Captain Paul Whipp will resume his lieutenancy and Lieutenant Eugene Hartnett will resume duties as a patrolman.

Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff expressed the belief that should Bates request an extension of leave it would be granted but that if the Civil Service commission is required to enforce the one-year rule it may affect other city employes on leave to perform vital industrial war work.

SHELBY DAM TO BOOST CITY'S WATER SUPPLY

Council Approves Structure After Mansfield Engineer Completes Survey.

SHELBY—City council authorized Mayor W. R. Morris to enter into a contract with the H. P. Jones and Company, Toledo engineers, for the drawing up of preliminary plans and specifications for the construction of a dam on the Black Fork river near the Tucker avenue bridge.

A resolution granting the authorization was approved during the regular semi-monthly session of the council Monday night at the city hall. The firm had given a base bid of $500 for the project.

Sanitary engineers had to be employed before the state board of health would approve any plans for the dam which will add an auxiliary source of water for the city in addition to the wells now used.

Boyd Wierman of Mansfield, civil engineer, recently made a survey of the drainage of the Black Fork river and drew up a suggested program for the construction of a dam across the Black Fork river to impound 1,800,000 gallons of water.

The survey will be used in the new drawings to be made by the sanitary engineers. Work will be started immediately on the plans.

Mayor W. R. Morris told council that the outlying traffic lights will be turned off from 10 p. m. until 7 a. m. daily. Under this plan, motorists will be saved from stopping so many times on the main highways through the city, conserving gasoline and rubber.

The traffic signal light at the intersection of High School avenue and Main street will only operate from 12 o'clock noon until shortly after 1 p. m. The only signals in operation here after 10 p. m. will be the ones at the east and west side squares.

During the meeting, the temporary appointment of Hobart Roberts as a fireman was confirmed. Roberts was appointed to the $110-a-month post to take the place of Ed Lysinger until the latter returns from the armed services.

PICTURE OF A RAILROAD

BELIEVE it or not, this is a railroad going full speed ahead—for Victory.

Inside that brightly lighted "factory"—the Erie locomotive repair shop at Hornell, N.Y.—tomorrow's transportation is being made ready tonight.

There, locomotives are rebuilt and repaired by skilled mechanics working in shifts around the clock.

The Erie and other American railroads own and operate 416 such "war factories" plus over 1100 smaller shops, which were in "full production" long before Pearl Harbor.

Railroad workers were then busy improving the whole railroad "plant"—terminals, yards, docks and bridges, as well as tracks and equipment. And, for that purpose, an average of $1,402,000,000 a year was spent.

Now these men are on the job night and day keeping existing equipment rolling. For it takes all of America's 44,300 locomotives, 45,200 passenger cars, and 2,000,000 freight cars—going all the time—to move our war materials, essential consumer goods, service men and other must travelers.

That the increasing demands of wartime transportation have thus been met without confusion or delay is a tribute to these railroad workers. They are doing their job well, with practically no new equipment. What's more, they'll still be on the job when peace comes—to help make this world a better place to live in.

"If in our lifetime we can succeed in improving the world even infinitesimally, we should have not lived in vain."—Voltaire.

Mansfield 'Remembered Pearl Harbor'

MANSFIELD "remembered Pearl Harbor" yesterday in a vigorous and impressive way by buying War Savings Bonds to a total approximating one-half million dollars and otherwise evidencing wholehearted support of the national war effort.

With members of the Junior Association of Commerce taking enthusiastic leadership in the Pearl Harbor anniversary activities, the $100,000 quota set for the day's sale of bonds was vastly exceeded and many "overflow" sales will extend through the remainder of the week in redeeming pledges made as a result of the city-wide distribution of blanks Sunday evening.

News of what is being done on "the home front" is to be carried in next Sunday's News-Journal to Mansfield and Richland county service men, wherever they are to be found by the mails—and it will be a proud report that can be made of the Pearl Harbor day's bond-selling.

'Barriers Down' An Enlightening Book

BECAUSE the real purpose of "freedom of the press" links so closely with individual freedom of thought and action, the new book, "Barriers Down," written by Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, will have widespread reader interest.

The right of people to KNOW what is going on in their community, state, nation and world is valueless unless they are provided with information sources that are complete, truthful and unbiased.

"Barriers Down" tells about the successful twenty-year fight made by the Associated Press to break the barriers of a powerful European news monopoly which permitted distortion of news to serve the purposes of countries in which it originated.

This was responsible, in large part, for neighboring countries in Europe failing to exchange accurate news, and it was not until just before the 1918 Armistice that South American countries were opened to AP service for North American news.

It was 1934 before the Associated Press finally succeeded in establishing an international freedom of the press in all except dictator-controlled countries of the world.

Belief is expressed by Mr. Cooper that if this crusade had been won in five years, instead of in twenty, the present war might have been prevented.

As a concluding thought, Mr. Cooper says: "Thus far America has had the distinct advantage over the peoples of most foreign countries because it has had a free press. I say 'thus far' because I do not know of the morrow. If there is a curb by any power in any country that now has a free press, it will be the people who will lose."

Where's the Daylight To Be Saved?

NOW that the confusion caused by shifting Thanksgiving around has been ended, it may not be impossible to have something done about the matter of shifting sunrise to the middle of the forenoon—as is now being experienced in Ohio.

First in the Central standard time zone, which placed the sun 28 minutes ahead of the clock, we then went to Eastern time—in which the sun lagged a half hour behind the clock—and we are now on War time, which gives the sun an hour and a half leeway in getting on the job.

This, the responsible agency of government avers, is a daylight saving expedient necessitated by war—but how's daylight to be saved before there's any to save, and what's the economy of burning up a lot of electricity to lighten the period between 7 and 8:30 a. m.?

There's a movement on foot to secure action by the state legislature making Central time the legal standard in Ohio, which would place War time on the former Eastern time basis—thus setting timepieces forward one hour.

Expression of favorable public opinion on this subject, coupled with endorsements of city councils and civic organizations throughout the state, would encourage legislators to take this action.

Better Lock Up Your Coffee

NEW NEED for safety deposit boxes arises as coffee rationing makes this commodity attractive to thieves.

Banks provide securely locked boxes for valuable papers; there are refrigerated lockers in which to keep meat; storage space can be rented for safekeeping of prized possessions—but thus far no thought seems to have been given to finding a secure hideaway for a surplus pound or two of coffee.

Now that the matter has been brought to local attention by the burglarizing of a restaurant, sole purpose of which appears to have been the theft of a few pounds of coffee, it's high time that something be done about it.

Remember About Those Income Taxes

ADVANCE preparation to pay taxes on THIS year's income is being strongly urged—it being feared that hundreds of thousands of people do not realize how much they will be obligated to pay next March 15 as a first quarterly installment.

Under the new schedules several million persons will be added to lists of income taxpayers and other millions will find their payments much larger.

One purpose of the new tax bill is to divert money from usual spending channels into the United States treasury and a program of regular saving to meet next year's payments on THIS year's income will be wise policy as THERE ARE NO EXTENSIONS FOR PAYMENTS ON INCOME TAXES.

Now that cartoonists are depicting Josef Stalin as a benign character, they'll probably be able to revamp the visage of Admiral Darlan to fit his new role.

As a revised version of the old Coue idea, the Detroit News suggests trying: "Every day in every way, we're getting butter and butter."

If "no news is good news," the Germans back home seem to be getting plenty of it.'

Here's a long detour on the road to Utopia—and very little gas in the tank.

Why Japan Is Toughest Enemy

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — How much licking the Japs will require after Germany and Italy have been knocked out completely is a matter concerning which considerable speculation is rife in military and especially in naval circles.

Italy is no problem. Benito Mussolini's soldiery is almost quitting already. The Italians can fight when they feel like it, but their country didn't want to get into the present conflict to begin with. They're anti-German traditionally and generally they're friendly to the United Nations.

The only difficulty will be to make as kindly terms as possible with 'em when the time comes. Benito may have to be spanked, but it would be an exaggeration to do anything materially worse with him. As for penalizing his people on account of him, it would be something like disciplining a whole family because one of its junior members had gone haywire and involved the entire outfit in trouble with the wholesale neighborhood.

Th honest fact is that I imagine Benito to have been initially a decent lad personally, but to have been seduced into his current ways by accidental contacts with tough company.

I get this impression from several of our own American statesmen, who met him in his early days as a Milan, Italy, newspaper editor. I can't mention 'em by name, since it would be calculated to get 'em talked about as pre-Axis sympathizers. Nevertheless, he took Italy in hand at a juncture when it was in extremely serious economic shape, directly following the last war, and temporarily rehabilitated it substantially.

Hitler's Influence.

Later Adolf absorbed him.

Italy would like to quit fighting. It would be rather disposed to tie a can onto Benito in order to do it.

Germany, being squshed, is capable of recognizing it, as it demonstrated toward the end of the last war.

But the Jap militarists, being nutty, aren't to be figured with.

The average Jap is rational. He knows when he's finished. The military samurai, however, are perfectly willing to commit suicide and take the entire aggregation with 'em.

We read what Emperor Hirohito says.

Hirohito has no more voice in the matter than I have. The militarists boss the job and, since they're clean crazy, they're unpredictable.

Minorty Runs Show.

Suppose, out of our millions, we had about 1,000,000 who did the dictating!

And suppose the remining millions stood for it? They mightn't believe in it, but no matter!

Now, that's what is the matter with Japan.

Being licked doesn't end it; they have got to be exterminated—not the whole population, but the militarists.

So Japan isn't through, when Germany and Italy are terminated.

It'll be our job to dispose of the Japs. What help we can get will be worth while. It'll be essentially our performance, though.

It'll be our particular business, too.

The U. S. A.'s the country that'll get the after-results.

Timely Editorial

Advertising In Wartime.

The department of commerce issued a statement the other day criticizing shortsighted retailers who resort to "scare" advertising in order to capitalize on expected shortages. As everybody knows, this kind of advertising is unpatriotic as well as stupid.

Fortunately, advertising of the "scare" variety is practically nonexistent now. Where one advertiser tries to take unfair advantage of the emergency, you'll find a thousand who are putting the national interest ahead of personal profit.

We think it's about time the department of commerce or some other appropriate agency took public notice of the unselfish work which American advertisers are doing. Many of them are devoting as much attention to victory items—war bonds, conservation, salvage campaigns and the like—as they are to the products and services which they have for sale. The great majority is responding magnificently to the nation's needs.—Akron Beacon-Journal.

Listen World!

Old American Way

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

IT WAS Thanksgiving morning and it promised to be a jolly holiday.

We'd planned a great fiesta. The biggest, youngest turkey on the ranch. Plum pudding which we'd made a month ago. A regiment of pies—pumpkin and mince, apple and cranberry. Red berries on the mantle with the oak logs crackling below. A wreath of laughing faces around the table, loafing for an hour after the terrific tension of the war. The old songs as the dusk came down.

When the day arrived, all plans went wrong. Our guests were stalled at home. No busses, trains or gas. Besides we had to work. Some 100 cows to move to another pasture. A field to plow before the coming storm. Copy to turn out. And so we put aside our dream of Thanksgiving. Plenty pouty about it, too, but still, there was a war. One couldn't pick and choose. And so with dawn we started on our jobs.

But scarcely had the golden oaks begun to flame before the word got around. We were alone. For miles the old folks heard; I don't know how. But down they came.

Over the hills, bumping in ancient automobiles . . . centering on ever more ancient nags. Young Raymond Sardella, balancing red berries on one side of his saddle horn and a dish of ravioli on the other. Young Webster, newly married, with a baby on the way, asking us to share their first Thanksgiving feast. Sunday he goes to war. But this day they were to share their joy. Up from the town, turkey and all the fixings from "Pop" Bergson. From Jenny Oneta, on the next ranch, more ravioli—a feast that would have seduced a sultan.

Then along the path, young Nita with her toddling little tyke. And with her, sisters Anna and Lena, lovely as anything Hollywood ever produced, to tidy the rooms while I worked, their arms heaped with the last chrysanthemums, scarlet, bronze and gold. Love and laughter and good fat food flooded in every hour of the day. Singing children dancing to the radio, little fat "Mister" chewing their holiday shins. Older folks calling their greetings.

All right, I'll confess I was a sissy. I left them all and put my head down on this antique ticker and—bawled. Life had seemed so lonely in that first gray hour but now it was flooding in a tide of friendliness and joy.

And it came to me how inexpressibly blessed was this tide, and how peculiarly American. For, whatever our present losses or burdens, we have kept the heritage of that initial Thanksgiving. Other nations have been founded on pride and conquest, but the secret of the American way of life was SHARING. Sharing whatever one had with joy and love. It didn't matter whether it was a fine bird or a bunch of wild berries, or the laughter of a little child; it was the giving that counted. The neighborliness, the warm sunshine and the smoke curling blue over the peaceful roof.

These were the simple things that spiced that first Thanksgiving meal. These are the things for which we are fighting today. For a time it seemed as if we had forgotten that blessed simplicity. But now, with war's increasing privation, it has come back again. Our tables are heaped with apples, hubbard squash, carrots, beans and pears. Common things? Perhaps. But they hold the essence of the American soul.

WAR IS A HIDEOUS THING. BUT WAR CAN ALSO BE A GLORIOUS THING IF IT BRINGS BACK BROTHERHOOD AGAIN.

Interpreting the War News

Air Raids By Allies Warn Hitler He Must Guard European Area

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

INTENSIFIED Allied air raids on western Europe and Italy are serving an even more useful purpose than the damage to war factories and communications, great as that is.

The raids have a direct bearing on the war in North Africa, which itself is a prelude to the invasion of Europe. They constitute notification to Hitler that he does not dare strip his European air strength for service in Africa, leaving himself increasingly vulnerable in the Reich and in the countries he had dominated.

The range and size of the attacks in the last few days give convincing evidence of the striking power of the Allies. They hit from lower Italy to northwestern France. The Netherlands and southwestern Germany. Bad winter weather did not keep them grounded.

Even the most enthusiastic proponents of air power do not contend that it alone can win the war. It is quite true, nevertheless, that Hitler cannot win without air dominance.

That he does not have, and cannot now hope to have. According to Washington, United States air production alone already exceeds that of the Axis, and is growing. Hitler might achieve temporary air superiority on one selected front by concentrating his force there, but he has too many fronts to cover.

Aside from Russia, he has a great perimeter of defense of about 6,000 miles from North Cape in Norway, down the western coast of Europe and along the Mediterranean to Greece. The Allies are capable of attacking at any point.

Then there is the long eastern front of 2,000 miles, where the Russians have an air force that has been able to cope with Hitler's for 18 months of war. If Hitler tries to withdraw too much air power from Russia, he is liable to leave himself dangerously exposed. As it is, he is barely holding his own there.

APPARENTLY Hitler already has drawn heavily on his air reserves, or has pulled planes out of Europe and Russia to strengthen his position in Africa. He was reported in dispatches last week to have achieved numerical superiority there.

However, a dispatch from C. R. Cunningham, United Press correspondent at Allied headquarters in North Africa, reports that American and British strength in all types of bombers is growing steadily and that there are prospects of an early major advance by the ground forces.

Hitler's advantage in the air should be only temporary. The Allied advance after the initial landing was swift until the Axis strong points in eastern Tunisia were reached. There was no time to prepare adequate air bases and organize the necessary ground crews.

Hitler meanwhile had excellent bases in nearby Sicily and Sardinia and in Tunisia itself. This advantage can be overcome. Then, in spite of the long haul which the Allies have for fighter planes, when it comes to a question of numbers Hitler cannot keep up with the pace. As for bombers, the Allies can get them in almost as easily as Hitler.

Lull In Libya Fighting Means Both Sides Readying for Finale

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

WITH the British Eighth Army in Libya at Bengazi—This lull in the fighting on the Libyan front should not be taken as indicating any slackening of the Allied effort to oust the Axis from northern Africa, for it is merely a period of intensive preparation for resumption of what is one of the decisive battles of the whole war.

Marshal Erwin Rommel knows that, and he is straining every nerve to get set at El Agheila to meet the fresh onslaught which is inevitable.

This whole great desert-splotched zone on both the Allied and Axis sides is swarming with activity. I have been crossing and recrossing hundreds of miles of this inhospitable territory and can testify that the war is moving apace.

The present lull is a perfectly normal thing. In the short period of about a month the Eight army chased the fleeing Hitlerites like rabbits across some 700 miles of desert.

Rommel was running towards his home territory where he had not only a favorable place to make a stand but also supplies and reinforcements. Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Eighth army commander, on the other hand was racing away from his bases as fast as he could go and it must be logged as one of the great tactical achievements of this war that he was able to cover such a distance and arrive strong enough to oust the Germans from their strategic port of Bengasi.

Things look good now in Eighth army territory. The morale of the army is absolutely top hole. That fighting spirit is the first requisite for victory.

At the same time there is no disposition to underrate the striking power still in the enemy's hands. Indications are that there will be a hard, bloody battle.

The Axis commander is in a strategically strong position. He has had time to get his breath after his headlong retreat and he has been receiving reinforcements and supplies from the continent.

In any event, whether Rommel likes it or not he must make the stand of his life at El Agheila while his lord and master has a chance to get set to defend himself on the continent.

Battle for Freedom

—By JOHN SELBY

"BARRIERS DOWN: THE STORY OF THE NEWS AGENCY EPOCH," by Kent Cooper (Farrar & Rinehart; $3).

FOR the first time in a good many years the directing head of a great American enterprise himself tells the whole story of his greatest achievement. The man is Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, and the story is to be found in "Barriers Down," published today.

This is what happened. Twenty-eight years ago Mr. Cooper found a cablegram lying in a basket in the New York offices of the Associated Press. It was from La Nacion, one of Buenos Aires' great newspapers, and it asked that Associated Press facilities be made available for its use. This was not especially remarkable, but the fact that the message was unanswered impressed Mr. Cooper. He asked his predecessor as general manager, Melville Stone, why there had been no reply.

The reason was that Mr. Stone felt the lack of an answer was enough; because of an agreement with what then was a world news monopoly it was impossible for the Associated Press to serve a South American paper. It started Mr. Cooper thinking, and although he was officially not concerned, since his job was to supervise the traffic department of the Associated Press, he saw no reason why he should not look into the situation.

He found that the world had been effectively divided among three great news agencies: Reuters in England, Havas in France, and Woolf in Germany. Of these the most powerful was Reuters. There were many other national agencies and all of them were bound to the main stem. The American co-operative was effectively barred from honest competition, and what was much worse, Mr. Cooper felt, the ideals of a free press were submerged. In one way or another, the world combine was responsive to government control, and its news was colored by nationalistic demands.

"Barriers Down" is the detailed and dramatic story of Mr. Cooper's long battle against this monopoly, not for the financial gain of the Associated Press, because that organization does not serve for profit, but so that a free interchange of free news might be had. And it was undertaken in the belief that the basis of world security is the unfettered transmission and publication of news.

A Big Day's Work

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE huge copper kettle, black outside from the smoke of many fires, but shining within, we swung securely with its bail atop an oaken beam, and filled with cider. Our fire was of oak and apple wood, from the slope, with a heavy backlog to act as reflector and windbreak. Soon thick foam gathered on the surface, before the hot cider began to boil, and I skimmed most of it off with the old copper skimmer.

Just after that, the kettle became a seething cauldron of rapidly moving currents. Whenever it threatened to boil over, I added a bit more cold cider, and when half the contents had evaporated and the rest tasted dark and strong we added 13 gallons of apple "schnits." "Schnits," in case you do not know, are pared, quartered apples always necessary in making Pennsylvania Dutch applebutter.

The mass grew hot and heavy boiling recommenced. Then the stirring began. An apple butter stirrer you have likely seen—a wooden scraper, full of holes, shaped like a gigantic foot, with a long handle.

The day was cool and it was pleasant to stand near the fire and work. I evolved a rhythmic motion that kept the stirrer going, over and back and through, so that no bit of apple might cling to the bottom long enough to burn. (When a kettle burns, it ruins not only the applebutter, but the kettle as well.) I enjoyed to hear the plopping of the constantly thickening mass.

The schnits were dissolved, and it was almost thick enough to spread when my wife appeared with a 25-lb. bag of granulated sugar and a box of cinnamon. I watched her pour it in—our canning sugar -- and stirred more rapidly to keep the stuff from sticking. Twenty minutes later, we lifted the kettle off and ladled out into gallon-size marmalade jars, more than 12 gallons of wholesome spread.

It was nearly dusk, but immediately we started a second batch. We worked until the wee morning hours, to finish the job.

My wife put cushions on a large flat stone block and there we sat in the quiet night, with the oldest boy 12, between us protected from the sharp east wind, and took turns stirring. It was threatening to snow. When we finally dipped out the last big jar of applebutter, we were too tired to carry the stuff inside, and left it, stacked in cartons, in the yard.

Our clothing and hair were permeated with odors of wood smoke and cider. Our feet dragged. Fastening the house door I looked outside, and saw the air was thick with snowflakes.

"I'm glad we didn't stop until we got done," remarked the sleepy boy, clumping up the stairs. "Now let it snow—we all can sleep!"

ALLIES HOLD IN THIRD DAY OF TUNISIA BATTLE

Dakar Opened to Navies of Allies; Soviets Are Slowed By Snow.

Dwight D. Eisenhower and Admiral Jean Darlan.

NBC and CBS correspondents at Algiers reported that Allied ships and planes were given free use of the prized African base nearest to South America as a result of the decision by Gen. Pierre Boisson, governor-general of French West Africa, to place himself under Darlan's orders.

Potentially Dakar affords the Allied navies a valuable base for guarding the sea supply lanes to the African front, and a shorter route from flying bombers to the battlezone.

The United States government has taken the attitude that Eisenhower's agreement with Darlan was military expediency. Some leaders of Gen. Charles-de Gaulle's Fighting French have objected to collaboration with the admiral.

Eisenhower's announcement said all Allied shipping held at Dakar was to be released, and all Allied seamen and others in internment there would go free.

In Spain, whose Falangist government Germany and Italy helped to establish, Generalissimo Francisco declared "we live in a new era—Spain has a place therein and will fulfill her part."

His speech had been advertised as one which would "settle the problem of Spain's international policy." If it did so, it was only by implication of Franco's sympathy with those who helped him to power.

He did not say what Spain would do, but declared: "Our task is great. When the war ends the old Europe will be dead—with its capitalism, imperialism, plutocracy."

In Libya, aerial activity increased, indicating perhaps that the British Eighth army soon would open an offensive against the El Agheila line on the road to Tripoli from the east.

Fighter bombers attacked Nazi gun positions northeast of the El Agheila line and strafed the coastal supply road along the Gulf of Sirte. Other Allied planes raided Bizerte and La Goulette, by night, and followed up with daylight attacks on the harbor at Sfax and German rail lines in Tunisia.

In Tunisia, too, Allied planes were reported taking an increasing part in the battle as they slowly overcame their earlier handicap of lack of advanced bases.

On the Russian front hard-pressed German forces were reported taking advantage of recent heavy snow in the Stalingrad area to strengthen their defense positions along the escape corridor west of the city.

Bitter fighting continued in the Stalingrad factory area which the Russians are trying to clear of invaders.

The German high command said its armored forces had broken through Russian positions to a depth of nine miles in the Kalinin-Lake Ilmen sector between Moscow and Leningrad, and were astride Russian supply lines.

The Berlin communique acknowledged that the Red army still was pressing its attack in the Don river bend with powerful tank forces, but said the German lines were holding.

Allies Smash 21 Jap Planes In Long Sweep

(By Associated Press)

In the southwest Pacific, Allied airmen had destroyed 21 planes today in offensive and defensive flights ranging from northeast New Guinea to New Britain and New Ireland, across almost 500 miles of ocean.

The biggest bag was on New Guinea where the Japanese sent 18 medium bombers, eight dive bombers and 12 zero fighters over Allied lines which have pocketed the invaders on the beaches at Buna and Gona. With little losses, the Allied fliers downed six medium bombers, give dive bombers and seven zeros.

Two Japanese planes were destroyed on their runways in a raid on Lae, farther north on the New Guinea coast, and one fighter plane was shot down over Gasmata, New Britain.

Wharves and storage dumps were set afire in a raid on Kavieng harbor, New Ireland.

There were no new reports of the ground fighting along the Buna-Gona beach, or on Guadalcanal.

An Associated Press correspondent reported in a delayed dispatch from Guadalcanal that Col. John M. Arthur, Marines commander, said the Americans had been averaging 50 to 1 over the Japanese in fatalities despite the fact that the Americans were pitted against Japanese veterans of Burma, Malaya, Sumatra and the Philippines.

"We are beating them," he said, "at their own game . . ."

Danger of a Japanese drive into Yunnan province to complete China's isolation from India's supply bases was emphasized again by a Chungking Chinese army spokesman who also declared that the Japanese were building two naval bases in Chekiang province on the China coast, augmenting the harbor installations of Hsiangshang and Sanmen bays.

These, he said, were "principally for defensive action against naval attacks by the allies."

The spokesman estimated the Japanese air force at between 700 and 800 planes in Indo China, Burma, Thailand and Malaya.

Heaviest Battleship Launched

The U. S. S. New Jersey, the heaviest battleship ever built (52,000 tons), leaves the ways at the Philadelphia Navy Yard after being christened by Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of New Jersey's governor.

Reveal U. S., British Pledge to Beat Japs

LONDON —(AP)— Messages exchanged by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill pledging their two nations to the utter defeat of Japan were made public here today.

"Our country no less than the United States was the object of an infamous outrage a year ago," Churchill told the president in a message on the anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

"We look forward one and all to the day when our full strength can be joined to that of our United States, Dutch and Chinese Allies for the utter and final destruction of Japan's aggressive power."

The president replied that "partial retribution in kind has been meted out to Japan in the past seven months but this is only the beginning."

"We will continue to strike with ever increasing force."

The prime minister also assured the peoples of Britain's Oriental territories that the years of defense "are behind us" and that Japan would be "stripped of her conquests, punished for her treachery and deprived of her power of evil."

"Retribution has always been sure," the prime minister said in a message noting the anniversary of Japan's attack on Hongkong and Malaya. "It is now growing near."

He urged the peoples of Britain's conquered possessions to "keep up your hearts. We shall not fail you."

Franco Praises Duce In Speech

LONDON— (AP)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared today in an address broadcast from Madrid that "we live in a new era—Spain has a place therein and will fulfill her part."

"Surrounded by war, Spain has been faithful to her traditions," Franco said in a speech to the third national council of the Falange.

Citing Premier Mussolini as an example of a leader who "has given justice to the Italian people by the Fascist revolution," Franco told his audience that "the Spanish revolution has not yet ended."

"The Republic brought misery and exploitation to this country," he asserted. "The presence of Spanish youth who are full of ideals guarantees the continuity of our movement.

"Our task is great. When the war ends the old Europe will be dead—with its capitalism, imperialism, plutocracy."

The Spanish radio said government officials and diplomats, including the German ambassador, assembled to hear Franco, whose speech had been advertised beforehand as one which would "settle the problem of Spain's international policy."

CHRISTMAS PARTY HELD LAST NIGHT

Women of the Moose Enjoy Program In Lodge Home; Anniversary of Pearl Harbor Attack Observed; Cards Played.

ONE of their largest social events of the year was the annual Christmas party held last night by the Women of the Moose. The lodge home was the scene of the program which was in charge of the war relief committee, with Mrs. Hazel Tupps as chairman, and the hospital guild committee, which is headed by Mrs. Opal Stentz. The committee members were attired in formal gowns for the occasion, and the party was given in honor of the new members.

Corsages of pine and holly were given to the committee women and new members. The junior graduate regent, Miss Ruth Roesch, was mistress of ceremonies. She introduced the officers and a short talk was given by Mrs. Helen Perry, senior regent. Songs by the group were "Silent Night" and "Jingle Bells." Mrs. Nannie Lowman, recorder, entertained with two readings. Miss Margaret Rizer sang "Christmas Carol," "Winter Wonderland" and "White Christmas." Three songs presented by little Beverly Wesson were "The Cradle Hymn," "Lamplighter's Serenade" and "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town."

The Brant sisters rendered "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing." Two songs were sung by little Jimmy Daugherty. Pianist for the program was Miss Edith Beilstein.

"Santa Claus" appeared at the party to distribute the gifts. The first anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor was observed with donations from the members. Miss Roesch gave an appropriate talk and the group sang "Remember Pearl Harbor."

After the program, cards were played and lunch was served at small tables. The room was attractively decorated around the Christmas theme. The lodge will have a business meeting at the hall Wednesday evening.

Formals Go Fragile In Chiffons

Left to right, white with pearl-embroidered girdle; misty rose-taupe gown; pale water green frock.

By SUSAN BARDEN
International Illustrated News Writer.

Perhaps as a reaction to the strong glitter influence in earlier collections of after-dark styles, a new midwinter star now rising in fashion skies introduces a theme of delicate sweetness and fragility in a romantic collection of soft flowing draped gowns of diaphanous rayon chiffons.

In direct contrast to the bold decor and dramatic treatment of gowns which feature allover sequin bodices, great splashes of glittering jewelled embroidery of brilliant color contrast, these new styles rely for charm on softness of fabric, color and line, with discreet ornamentation used only as occasional accent to distinctive draping detail.

Delicate clear pastels and vivid tones such as flame red, emerald turquoise and tangerine are used for modified decollete styles that are delightfully young and festive. Deep rusty shades, from smoky gray to midnight blue, newly fashionable tobacco brown, and dusty black are subtly glamorous in sheerly feminine dinner gowns with flattering low necklines and brief sleeves.

Airy Grace Achieved.

The long torso line shares honors with the natural waistline in these filmy styles, and floor-length circular skirts have the special airy grace that is achieved by the use of yards and yards of fabric that is both sheer, soft and priority free.

Great originality is shown in the draping of the slenderly molded bodices. Enchanting adaptations of the front crossed line seen in the robes of Grecian ladies is used for the rounded contours. The pale water green evening dress is made along these lines. It is fashioned with a cross drape in close folds at the front and caught at each side of the neckfront with jewelled clasps in a pointed sweetheart neckline.

Another style is the bra-line molding which is shown in the figure-flattering dinner gown made of rose taupe rayon chiffon. This model features a rather low neckline and the briefest of sleeves.

The white evening dress is made along classically simple Greek tunic lines. The draping forms a deep V decolletage in both back and front, and the frock is further enhanced by an ornamental pearl embroidered girdle at the natural waistline.

Another party honoring Miss Van Derau was given Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. James Courtney, Carpenter road, with Miss Eleanor Clingan and Mrs. Norman Leonard as associate hostesses, in the form of a dessert-bridge and bedroom shower.

Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. A. C. Bell and Mrs. Fred Pattridge. Miss Van Derau was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

WAVES Want Permission to Wed Navy Men

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A letter from a WAVE asks if Uncle Sam is pulling "teacher's pet" stuff on the Women's Auxiliary of the Army.

The Command now permits WAVES to marry soldiers, Coast Guardsmen or Marines but they may not accompany a Navy man to the altar. If they do, they must leave the service. No WAVE can marry during training or while awaiting training.

The WACCS on the other hand are dealt with more liberally. Many a fair WAAC was already married to an officer when she enlisted. All that was necessary was for her to prove that her dependents, if any, were properly provided for.

Furthermore, a WAAC may marry in the army, an officer or an enlisted man, if Cupid makes a sure-fire hit, but a WAVE is not privileged to marry a service man who "sails the ocean blue."

Not likely that Uncle Sam is pulling "teacher's pet" stuff, but there are fewer WAVES than WAACS, and that seems to have something to do with it. But let the WAVES take heart. It was only within the past fortnight or so that the Command relaxed its rigid ban against marriage to men in the Armed forces. And as long as they are permitted to marry soldiers, Coast Guardsmen and Marines, this concession seems to be the equivalent of letting the book agent get his foot in the front door.

Perhaps it won't be long now before the Navy is sold to the idea of including Navy men in the list of WAVE eligibles.

The WAVES now have five training centers and at the time of this writing, they had 2,800 students. Mt. Holyoke college has accommondations for 300 probationary officers and officers' candidates. And three mid-western universities already have 1600 enlisted WAVES attending courses for women, radio men and storekeepers. There are 900 probationary officers and officer candidates in training at Smith college.

Enlisted WAVES cannot be more than 36 years of age and Midshipmen recruited for intensive technical training cannot be over 30. A WAVE may enlist at 20, and wedding bells ring often around that divine age.

Child Study In Manners Encouraged

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

BECAUSE so many mothers write me about eating problems in the child from 10 months to four or five years of age I have limited discussions of these problems almost exclusively to this age range.

Yet the child at six or 12 is in as much need of a properly selected diet as the child at three or four. Besides, this older child is at the age when he needs to acquire the social graces in order to be comfortble and likeable later. You know what a nuisance a dinner guest may be who has all sorts of food dislikes.

Won't Try New Foods.

"Dear Mr. Myers:—We have a great problem in our home. Our boy 6 years old was raised from an infant on corn syrup and milk and as he grew older was fed all kinds of strained food and now will not eat the following foods—potatoes, vegetables, meat—and will not taste them to see if he likes them. He wants bread and jelly, pastry, fruit and milk. He comes to the table and begins to cry when he sees his plate ready and will not touch any of these things. He is very active and sleeps well but must always have some kind of cereal before going to bed. What do you suggest in this case?"

I advised this mother to be very gentle and patient with this child; that she should not expect quick and easy results with him, that she should not tell her child he must eat anything nor serve all the proper foods on his plate at one time. I told her, instead, to let him name one of the foods among those he disliked and then to place or let him place as little of this food on his plate as he wished, just so the amount were large enough to be visible, saying to him he did not have to eat this but that he could have no other food at this meal unless or until he did.

Then let him have no other food before the next meal, when she would proceed in like fashion. In case he chose to eat this food he should be allowed to eat what he liked for the rest of the meal. Count it a great success if he chooses to eat, after a few days, as much as half a teaspoonful of food he formerly refused entirely.

Very gradually proceed in like fashion to get him to eat other foods he formerly disliked.

Some parents will be wise in not attempting to get a child to eat one or several foods over which he has had violent emotion but provide substitutes containing practically the same food values.

Get Co-operation.

Don't begin to solve such problems with a child until you have the assurance from all adults of the family that they will also eat of what is set before them, making no remarks about food likes and dislikes at all; that, moreover, neither you nor anyone else will express any feeling or show any concern about the child's eating.

Q. No matter how hard I try, I can't get my five-year-old girl to talk. She can say different words but when it comes to forming sentences, one cannot understand what she as saying.

A Have a specialist check her hearing. Read a great deal to her. Talk slowly and distinctly in her presence. Don't ask her to talk but talk to her about what you are doing with or for her. Being with other children her age should help her.

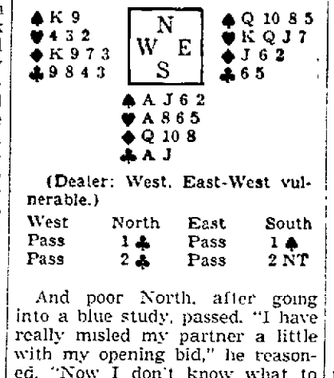
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

STICK BY YOUR GUNS

Unless you have opened with a real psychic bid—one which is on a hand nowhere near a sound bid in total strength—it will usually pay you to keep bidding normally on a holding which has been only slightly shaded. That is, if the hand contained the secondary values, in distribution or intermediate cards, to have made the original bid sensible. But it is a tough spot to be in, having opened lightly. You fear that either dropping the bidding or keeping on may prove costly.



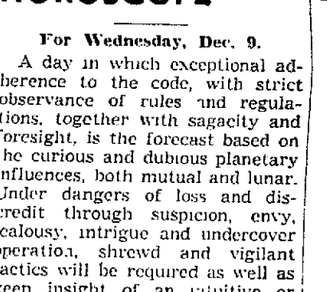
(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 NT

And poor North, after going into a blue study, passed. "I have really misled my partner a little with my opening bid," he reasoned. "Now I don't know what to do. If his hand is the strongest it could be, with that bidding, we can make a game. If it is the weakest it could be, he will have a dickens of a job making 2-No Trumps. I wish I had never opened this." He was right on the latter. If he waited for South to open, 3-No Trumps would have been easy to reach, as North then would have had about a maximum pass.

West led the diamond 3, which rode around to the J and Q, and nine tricks were now a cinch—two in that suit, five in clubs and the two other aces. Even if West led a heart, the contract was safe, as the 10, 9, and 8 would have produced a second stopper if needed. Even if South had to open the diamond suit himself, he could build two tricks in it by finessing the 10 on the second round.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: North East-West vulnerable.)

Is there any room for argument what West should do on this deal after East bids 2-Spades, West 2-No Trumps and East then 3-Clubs?

Keeping the Figure Trim And Snappy

By MME. QUI VIVE

Madame Fashion, who has playfully distorted the feminine figure with wasp-waisted corsets, hobble skirts, hip pads, and bustles, has become a worker in the cause of physical education. She is producing styles that make for health, vitality and normal lines. In the good old days that the grandmas chirp about, it wasn't possible for a woman to eat a man-sized meal because of the corset she wore and laced to the limit. Now a woman can sit down to her steak and onions, suffer neither discomfort nor privation of appetite. No matter what sort of a place it happens to be right now, the world is a better place for a woman than it was in the past.

What we must have now is the trim waistline, small, rounded breasts, and flattened tummy. Clothes demand precisely that.

How does one attain the desired silhouette? By keeping to a reducing diet if the body is hefty, by adding more building fare if the feminine frame needs a pleasing curve here and there. It can be done, and at no inconvenience. Normal weight and measurements make for health and vitality.

The heavyweight is lugging around excess baggage. The bantamweight suffers from malnutrition.. All plump darlings do not overeat. All skinnies don't keep to a starvation diet. The trouble is that neither type gets all the food elements necessary for vitality and well-being. The plumpies must cut down on fats, sweets and starches. The skinnies must add a little more of these materials to the daily fare. Not enough women understand precisely what is meant by well-balanced diet. Goodness knows enough is written about it. Why not read and learn?

It is true that silhouettes are inherited, to a certain extent. Fat mamas have fat daughters. But, then, daughter should start early in life to ward off excess weight. She must not only heed the grocery intake, but she must have plenty of exercise.

Lots of women have never found out that daily exercise can be good fun. Those who have a certain time for a muscle workout wouldn't miss it for anything because it sharpens their mind, cheers their spirits, provides them with zest. Once established, the exercise habit is an exhilerating pastime, not tiresome drudgery, as Miss Lazy Bones fancies.

Rhythmic movements of the body, combined with muscular exertion soothe the nervous system, stimulate the blood streams, air wash the lungs, put starshine in the eyes, and give healthy coloring to the complexion.

DINA CASHMAN + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER IV

Tom and Dina picked their way cautiously along the stretch of plank sidewalk, followed the railway ties for a space, veered off to lumps of cement sidewalk that long neglect had buckled and broken into an irregular stony pathway.

"Can I come in?" Tom asked when they reached the Cashman kitchen door.

"And wake Pop?" the girl countered in a whisper.

"I'll be quiet!"

They fumbled their way in; Dina found the switch, and the grimy interior of the kitchen was revealed.

Tom lighted a cigaret, and Dina rapidly reduced the room to something a trifle less chaotic.

"You'd think Myrna or Dooley could clear up," Dina complained "But I guess Mama and Pop came i nand sent them to bed," she decided on second thought, "and Mama—"

"Don't you ever get mad at your family, Dina?" Tom asked, his infatuated eyes never leaving her.

"Mad at them? I'm always boiling at them," Dina answered. "No, I don't blame Mama," she added after a moment. "She's had an awfully hard break. My father's never had regular work. That's why we left Arkansas Mama's had 10 children in 20 years—I had a sister named Grace, you know, next to Art, and then there was little Johnny who died just after we got here. There was a Dorothy, too, in between El'ner and Donny. Dorothy was drowned."

"Lord, what things mothers have to go through!"

"Don't they?" Her face paled a trifle; a stab of realization brought all the misery and fear back again. She had forgotten for a moment of peace; now peace was gone.

"Are you going to marry, Dina?" Tom asked suddenly, oddly.

"Am I — ? You mean — am I ever?"

"No." He laughed gruffly, cleared his throat. "I mean are you going to marry me?"

"Oh, Tom, I don't know!" she retched out her hand and his fingers closed on it eagerly. "Even if I'm worrying myself to death, for nothing," she thought, "I can't marry Tom; I can never marry Tom!"

Tom's devotion, his sympathy were so precious Dina could not refuse them tonight; she clung to his hand, and the blue eyes that smiled into his were wet with tears.

"Look!" he said. "Why shouldn't we get married? I've been sending Mom $25 a month, but she doesn't need that any more, now that Nellie's going to be married and Frank's got a job. I could send that to your mother.

"We could have one of those little cottages up at the mills," he went on, encouraged by her silence, "and we could fix it up little by little, it only costs $15 a month!

"We can get second-hand furniture, too, and the company'll lend you money for a stove and a refrigerator. They're glad to help. You'd like your own home, wouldn't you, Di?"

"You know I'd love it," she answered very low and in a hesitant manner.

"I've been thinking about asking you to marry me ever since you first came here; you know that, don't you, Dina?"

"I don't know why! If we weren't the original emigrant train!" the girl said nervously, forcing a little reminiscent laugh, determined to carry the conversation to safer ground. "The old green jalopy with mattresses and bedsprings roped on top, and the truck we borrowed. I'll never forget the rain, and the coldness of this house, and your mother sending us over a pot of hot coffee and a tin of cookies."

"I saw you that night. 'Member that it stopped raining about five, and the sun was breaking through the clouds, and you came out to the gate to call the kids in for supper, and I came over?"

"I remember thinking that I was about as filthy as a person could get and not be arrested."

"You were beautiful. But you weren't as beautiful as you are now," Tom said.

"Ah-h-h-h!" Dina laughed a little sadly. This talk in the garishly lit kitchen, had all the uncomfortable quality of a dream. Tom did not know what she was thinking; he did not know what she was fearing; he could not have said one word of all this if he had known. He had not even met Vere Holland; Vere, whose simplicity and charm and niceness won everyone's friendship instantly.

"Oh, Vere," she said in her soul, "where are you? Why aren't you here? You could make it all right. He may walk in tomorrow," she thought; "everything may be all right this time tomorrow. I may be laughing about all this tomorrow. But no, I'll never laugh about it—"

"You are tired! You're not listening!" Tom said good-naturedly. Dina came to herself with a little start.

They were standing, she wavered a little, swaying toward him and he put his arm about her with infinite affection and sympathy.

"You do too much, Dina. At the grocery all day, cooking and cleaning here for the whole crowd of them, and then dancing at night!"

"The dancing at night is the only thing I could cut out, Tom, and it's my only fun. Unless it's the pictures, and they give me a sort of headache if I've been indoors all day."

"Well, will you think about it, Dina? After all, I can't do any more than ask you."

"And I love you for asking me," she said wearily and unsmiling. "I'm not good enough for you, Tom — and I'm tired — and Pop tried to borrow some money today and couldn't get it—"

"How much money?" His wallet was out instantly. But Dina shook her head. "Don't begin that," she said, her eyes suddenly beginning to swim. "You know my father. Or rather you don't know my father!"

"It's just one of the bad times in your life, Dina," Tom said heartenningly. "You're bogged down with the family and no money and rain and dishes, and it's damned unfair! But Art ought to get a job pretty soon, and things'll straighten out, and you'll come up to a nice little four-room cottage at Westwood, and we'll paddle our own canoe. Oh, listen"—he interrupted himself to reassure her as she suddenly drew back with widened eyes—"I don't mean that we won't carry on! We'll have Myrna and Dooley with us, or we'll take El'ner for a term. It isn't that But I mean you'll be out of the main mess."

"It sounds good!" the girl whispered, as if to herself.

"Well, you think about it, won't you?"

"As if I could help thinking about it!" But she knew herself to be deceiving him; she accepted his good-night kiss apathetically, resting her head for a minute against his cheek, angry at herself because tears were coming again.

"Get as much sleep as you can."

"I will!" She locked the door when he was gone, considered ablutions. But the boiler was cold; the kettle was cold; the house was draughty and dark. Dina undressed by such gleams of the corner street lamp as crossed the bedroom obliquely and crawled in beside Dooley.

Vere Holland had come into Cotta's on a warm October evening, now ten weeks in the past. A tall boy with fair hair and the consciously audacious manners of a favorite to whom everything will be forgiven, he had obviously been the court jester for his group of four long before Dina and her special friends noticed him.

They had been at an adjoining table; two girls from San Francisco's debutante group, whose attitude toward Cotta's had been one of amused superiority, and another man somewhat of Vere Holland's type. The four had been not so much entertained as in the mood for entertainment; they had danced, had sat smoking and drinking for an hour, and then Vere quite suddenly had come over to Dina's table, had introduced himself and been introduced with great easiness and laughter.

Ward Binn had gone back with him to his table, and presently they had all been talking and sharing drinks and sandwiches at the two tables pushed together. There were nine in the party now, and everyone had danced with everyone else, and Dina Cashman had experienced the most bewildering, the most breath-taking sensations of her life.

For it had become instantly noticeable that Vere Holland had eyes for no one else, and Dina had never known anyone like Vere.

His sleek golden hair, his round friendly face, his fine clean hands that had never done any hard labor, though they were well browned and looked athletic; these all would have marked him as different from all the boys Dina had known, even if every word he said, his clothes and the way he wore his tie, the gesture with which he had jiggled a cigaret out of his silver cigaret case and offered it had not done so.

He was good-natured, amusing, and affectionate. He made them all laugh, he paid for everything, and when one of the other boys said somewhat gruffly that the check ought to be split two ways he looked genuinely surprised and said, with a pleasant readiness to grasp names and personalities that was charcteristic of him, "Oh, shut up, Dunk! Or I'll come around to the machine shop tomorrow and poke you into the furnace."

While the others danced he sat with his chair pulled about, so his back was turned to the room, and murmured to Dina. He could not seem to hear enough about her.

A migratory worker's daughter? Oh, she was not! And Myrna, hey?—and Dooley? What the dickens was the real name of a girl called Dooley? Julia? Then for heaven's sake why not call her Julia?

"It sounds rough to have you say you room with Dooley," he had told Dina. "Your name's Geraldine, is it? All right, I'm going to call you that. And when are you coming in to town to have dinner and go to a show with me? What's your telephone?"

"We haven't one. And if you came and saw where we live, you'd know why. Nobody has a telephone there. The nearest one's the drugstore, over on Thirteenth. We live in Railway Flats."

To this he had listened respectfully, evidently impressed. But he was too kind, he was too much of a gentleman, she had perceived, to show any pity.

He had written down the name of Meyer's grocery carefully and had asked her seriously if she wouldn't go to dinner with him, and Dina's heart had sung paeans of joy. Then the others had come back, and she and Vere had danced again; danced, as far as the girl was concerned at all events, into a world of sheer ecstasy.

"Looky," he had said in a businesslike way, when the moment of parting had come, "this is Friday, see? I'm going duck shooting tomorrow, be back Monday. Looky. I'll see you Tuesday. Hey?"

But he had not come in on Tuesday nor Wednesday either, and Dina had been in a fair way to recover from the dizzying sensations the opening of their friendship had caused her, sensations that had washed over her like smothering waves, when on Thursday, glancing over her cashier's desk in the grocery, she had seen him studying the soup shelves with absorption.

Her heart had given a suffocating spring.

The smell of fresh vegetables and wet clothing had been strong in the place that day, a wet-day smell forever to be associated in Dina's mind with the irrational wild delight of seeing him again.

"Excuse me, Miss! Miss!" he had said loudly, half turning his head over his shoulder. "Have you any onion soup with the cheese already in?"

"I—don't know—that we have," Dina had answered thoughtfully. Frances could take the register for a moment; Dina had walked across to stand beside him and look at the shelves. "How do you do?" she had said under her breath.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I hoped my father did not notice my dismayed start of surprise at his request.

"Let me repeat that," I said, putting down all speculation. "I am to ask the Veritzens if they will have a reunion dinner or after-theater supper for Georges tonight, with Mary, Noel and myself as guests?"

"That is correct," he said, "Will you attend to it soon?"

"Immediately," I said, rising, but my father waved me back.

"Of course, you will have to give them some explanation," he said, and you and Mary are also entitled to one. But first," as he turned to Mary, "you and Noel will be able to come, will you not?"

"Able and willing," Mary said. "Of course, I really can speak only for myself, and I'm raring to go. But I never knew Noel to turn down one of his stepmama's parties. She knows how to plan."

I gave her a cautioning signal and she stopped quickly. I had seen that my father was getting impatient, and now he spoke.

"Tell the Veritzens," he said, "if they have not guessed it already, that Georges has been masquerading as an old man, and that you, Mary and Olina have seen him at the restaurant. Better tell them also of his visit here today, and that he has taken refuge with me.

"But," he went on, his voice subtly sterner, "tonight may be the last time, for an indefinite period, that any of you will have a chance to see Georges. He is in deadly danger, and for his own safety I am taking him down to the hideaway.

"The lad has been under a great nervous strain," he said, "and I think it will be good for his morale to have a chance tonight to mingle with old friends and forget his cares.

"Naturally, you are thinking of Milner," he said, "as a potential danger to Georges. But even if Milner knows that an old man visited your suite, he can't know that the old man has been transformed into a young man. Adams, who as you know is in my service, will say, if an inquiry is made, that the old man left the hotel about this time.

"Please ask Olga to stipulate that Joe and Henri, and no one else, be permitted to serve the dinner. I am sure of the loyalty of those two waiters. And ask her, when making arrangements with Milner, to say casually that the dinner is being given in honor of a young English playwright, unexpectedly arrived in this country. Tell Philip I will later devise an arrangement with him whereby, with the aid of an elevator operator who is one of my men, Milner may be made to believe that the young guest came in with Veritzen and left by himself.

"In any case," he finished, "Milner never will suspect that Georges is in the hotel?"

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Dec. 9.

A day in which exceptional adherence to the code, with strict observance of rules and regulations, together with sagacity and foresight, is the forecast based on the curious and dubious planetary influences, both mutual and lunar. Under dangers of loss and discredit through suspicion, envy, jealousy, intrigue and undercover operation, shrewd and vigilant tactics will be required as well as keen insight of an intuitive or strategic quality. Beware traps, plots and get-rich-quick schemes.

Those whose birthday it is may be given the opportunity to demonstrate their ability for sagacity, strategem and insight to avoid plots or schemes, with the cleverness to vanquish pernicious endeavors born of enmity, jealousy, hatred and duplicity. While this shrewdness may inflame to the verge of similar reprisals, with reckless or drastic action, strict observance of rules is urged.

A child born on this day although having exceptional talents of a creative or artistic nature, with shrewdness and keen calculation, yet may suffer from enmity, treachery and jealousy.

A Brindisi is a drinking song, the name being derived from the Italian word meaning toast.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This at Home

Saves You Big Dollars, and It's So Easily Mixed.

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and 1 cup water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.

And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold promptly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

LAUNCH FIRST WAAC SCHOOL FOR NON-COMS

65 Candidates Begin Their Intensive Training at Daytona Beach, Fla.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—(INS)—The first non-commissioned officer school for WAACS opened here at the second WAAC training center recently, when 65 WAACS sent to serve as training cadre took their first classes.

This group will receive a week's intensive training before taking up active duty with the first new companies coming to Daytona. They will form the nucleus around which the new companies are built during their training period here.

Thirteen non-commissioned officers will be assigned to a company, three duty leaders, one to a platoon for drill; one chief company clerk and one assistant, having the rank of leader; a first leader for the company; one supply leader and six duty junior leaders.

The course of study for the non-commissioned officer school is keyed to the duties of leaders and junior leaders in the WAACS. It includes classes in company records and administration. That is how morning reports are made up, how to deal with a duty roster and all the detailed clerical work that must be done for a company in the field; in supply, how to draw supplies and how to keep the records; in methods of instruction, inspections and the part a non-commissioned officer takes in preparing a company for inspections.

They will receive as well almost two hours a day in drill instruction. All non-commissioned officers are taught to be adept at handling this type of instruction. They will be taught army hand, arm and whistle regulations.

They will receive also an hour course of a general nature in the following subjects: voice drill, dim-out, fire and blackout drill, chemical warfare and how to conduct a gas mask drill, first aid drill, map reading, and the manual of Guidon, Color and Standard.

A two-hour course in leadership will stress the position of a leader and junior leader in the group and their responsibilities to their company in matters of morale.

A refresher course in WAAC regulations that they received in their basic course, will make it possible for them to answer the questions of the new WAACS in regard to what WAACS may or may not do. They will also receive in this course knowledge of any changes in regulations that may have developed since the corps was organized in July.

GIRL STUDIES ENGINEERING

COLUMBUS—(INS)—With women taking their place alongside men in the nation's war plant assembly lines few places remain which man may call his own.

Yes, women are even invading engineering laboratories, as Ohio State university officials will tell you.

Demure, brown-haired Elizabeth Izant of Cleveland Heights, who will be graduated in March, is the only co-ed senior in the school's engineering department. Only one other girl, a freshman, is registered in the course, but it is likely others will be coming forth, university officials predict.

Plane Company to Finance Training of College Women

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — To alleviate an acute shortage of engineers, the Curtiss-Wright corporation has announced it would pay for the training of 800 college women who will attend eight engineering schools beginning Feb. 1.

Formation of the "engineering cadet" classes was announced by C. Wilson Cole, supervisor of the company's engineering personnel bureau, at the winter meeting of the Middle Atlantic section of the society for the promotion of engineering education.

To be eligible, women must have taken elementary college mathematics and now be completing their sophomore, junior or senior year.

Those selected will be sent to Cornell, Northwestern, Purdue, Iowa State college, University of Minnesota, University of Texas, Pennsylvania State college or Rensselaer Polytechnic institute.

The women will receive $10 a week, with tuition and cost of room and board furnished by the Curtiss-Wright firm. They will take courses to prepare them for specific positions in either airframe or propeller divisions.

It was explained that the women would not replace men engineers now holding jobs but would allow promotion of men to more technical duties. The women engineers will be paid from $130 to $150 a month.

Recruiting will start Tuesday with interviewers visiting 100 colleges, Cole said.
